Butler Reveals His Career as Spy

Today

High Wages, High Dividends.

When a Dreamer Wakes.

Poor Bulldog, Poor Lamb.

Overalls and a Baby Sister.

—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

GERARD SWOPE, president of the General Electric Company, tells the International Chamber of Commerce it is the business of each industry to regularize employment, and avoid seasonal, or cyclical, periods of idleness. Mr. Swope gave his associates, the other industrial kings, sound advice. Their prosperity depends absolutely on the prosperity of their own and others' employes.

It is the SIXTY THOUSAND MILLION DOLLARS EARNED AND SPENT EVERY YEAR BY AMERICAN WORKERS, IN NORMAL TIMES, THAT MAKE PROSPERITY.

The few that live on unearned income cannot absorb the nation's automobile, radio, washing machine or vacuum cleaner output.

ALOYSE MEYER, of Luxemburg, head of the Europe's "steel cartel," which means an international trust, advocates lower wages, and lower standards of living.

Cutting $2 from a $5 day wage, would cut off ONE HUNDRED PER CENT of the workers' spending, for anything beyond food and lodging. Mr. Meyer says "high wages caused the depression." The fact is that high wages POSTPONED the depression. Our prosperity came from buying, and high wages made buying possible.

IF IN SEARCH of encouraging thoughts, try this:

In 1929 our "great minds" assured us that the depression wouldn't last, everything would be going sweetly in the spring of 1930.

THEY WERE WRONG.

Now some change from excessive optimism to excessive pessimism, predicting a long depression. Perhaps they are wrong AGAIN. Once wrong, twice wrong, is often the rule.

RIGHT OR WRONG, the intelligent citizen will not waste time wondering when the depression will end, but will get to work IN THE DEPRESSION to end his part of it.

Sometimes in a beautiful dream you own mountains of gold, fine ladies are playing the harp to entertain you, the world is at your feet. You wake up at 7, realizing that you must be at the office by 8. You don't say:

"Put me back to sleep, give me back by dream."

THAT'S WHAT everybody should do, put on his shoes, go to work, and never mind about the dream that was disturbed in October, 1929.

This is a big country, plenty of room, plenty of sunshine, plenty of opportunity, too much of all the important things, from money to coal, sugar to oil, cotton to copper, and wheat.

TO PULL success and independence out of depression all you need do is work. You cannot, as Mr. S. Wertheim observes, "talk yourself something in."

A SAD LITTLE story is connected with Tuesday's flight of the J-3 from the government naval air station at Lakehurst, New Jersey. Tige, 9-month-old bull pup, seized one rope while the sailors were holding down the gas bag. He enjoyed the work and could not make up his mind to let go when the others let go.

The gas bag carried him up 400 feet, then he dropped. He lies somewhere among New Jersey's pine trees.

Tige will have the sympathy of certain bulldogs in Wall street that, also, could not make up their minds to let go.

BRYAN UNTIEDT, Colorado boy who saved several lives in the March blizzard, is out of the White House, back in his overalls, at home, helping his mother with the weekly washing, and his father feeding the pigs. Asked about Washington's wonders he said he hadn't seen anything as fine as his baby sister. He held her in his arms for a while, before he put away his store clothes, and put on his overalls.

Young Untiedt doesn't know it, but he probably is happier than the President, whom he left behind in Washington. Overalls, the country and a baby sister make a pleasant combination.

FINLAND'S BEER, with alcoholic content raised from 1.6 to 2.25, is welcomed so enthusiastically that breweries are unable to produce enough. Yet there has been no drunkenness, for such beer, it is said, does not intoxicate.

Finland's absolute prohibitionists object, calling it "an entering wedge." Prohibitionists in the United States would not permit the sale of such beer and if they wanted to permit it, bootleggers would prevent it.

CHINA, if you please, starts a five-year plan of her own, copying Russia, asking a loan of $15,000,000 to get started. Textile mills, salt and sugar refineries, a chemical works, are to be included in the program, with much agricultural development.

Shall we now have rice-dumping from China, to match wheat and timber dumping from Russia? Industrialists, with tears to shed, should prepare to shed them now, or prepare to

SCOUTED ARMY OF MEXICANS FOR U. S.

Intoxicated Huerta Yielded Secrets at Time of War Threat, General Relates

PHILADELPHIA, May 7.—(AP.)—Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler served in 1914 in Mexico as a spy obtaining information for President Wilson at a time when relations with the Mexican government headed by Victoriano Huerta were strained.

The general posed as a bibliophile, an eccentric entomologist, a capitalist, a secret service operative, an author and an accountant.

While intoxicated, Huerta signed an order giving the Marine officer power to enter every army barracks in Mexico City. The mission won Butler his first Congressional Medal of Honor.

Gen. Butler told the story last night in addressing the annual dinner of the Unity Stores Association.

Posing as a detective looking for a murderer from Ohio who was believed to have joined the Mexican army, Butler said he gained the confidence of one of Huerta's aides. The aide finally obtained for him an audience with President Huerta.

After relating the incident, Butler added:

"This yarn hasn't hitherto been published, so I don't know whether the Mexican ambassador to the United States will take a shot at it or not. I suppose before telling it, I really ought to jump down to Mexico City and see if the palace really is there."

Butler Dispute With Envoy Settled, Stimson Says

WASHINGTON, May 7.—(INS.)—The Bellegarde-Butler incident "has been satisfactorily closed and the Navy Department has been so notified," Secretary of State Stimson said today.

The controversy, which resulted in Stimson sending Haitian Minister Bellegarde a courteous note asking an explanation, started over whether Fort Riviere, in Haiti, ever existed, as questioned by Bellegarde. Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler got the Congressional Medal of Honor for capturing it in 1915 and he complained against Bellegarde's remarks.

Later the minister announced he was misquoted, and it is believed his reply, which Stimson refused to make public, reiterated this declaration.

HOLDUP FOILED IN GRUNDY BANK

BRISTOL, Pa., May 7.—(AP.)—Three young men were frustrated today in an attempt to hold up the Farmers National Bank of Bucks County here by employes, one of whom turned on a burglar alarm.

The men entered the bank with pistols drawn and ordered employes and a customer to raise their hands. One employe shouted to another to sound the alarm and the men fled, pursued by John Healy, bank watchman, and a posse of citizens.

Joseph R. Grundy, former United States senator, is president of the bank, and arrived at the institution a short time after the attempted holdup.

CHUM RESCUES DROWNING LAD

Two boys, one 7 and the other 13, are the center of an admiring group in Esplen public school today. They are both heroes in the eyes of their school chums as a result of their experience on a raft in Chartiers Creek yesterday.

James Hoffman, 7, of 3006 Esplen street, was playing with Bobbie Riley, 13, of 126 Earl street, and two other boys. Their youthful imagination conjured pirates—hale and hearty buccaneers on the high seas of Chartiers Creek.

"Man overboard!"

Bobbie jumped in after him, clothes and all, and dragged his chum to shore. Said Bobbie:

"The water was cold and muddy, but it was over Jimmie's head and he can't swim."

Both boys were surrounded with eager questioners at school this morning. Over and over again the story of the rescue was told until "bell time."

50 OVERCOME IN $7,000,000 BUFFALO FIRE

Firemen Fighting Armory Blaze Felled; Building Is In Ruins, Church Razed

BUFFALO, N. Y., May 7.—(AP.)—Fire which swept through the One Hundred and Sixth Field Artillery armory here and caused damage estimated by Capt. William Speidel, regimental supply officer, at more than $7,000,000, was completely under control early today.

The blaze spread during the night to a nearby church and destroyed the structure. Fire officials estimated this loss at approximately $50,000.

RUINS SMOLDER

The ruins were still smoldering, but most of the suburban companies summoned to the scene were ordered back to their stations. Of the more than 50 firemen overcome by smoke, all but two had been discharged from local hospitals.

Minute Men of a legion post were drilling when John D. Marvin, a city fireman off duty and a member of the Minute Men, discovered smoke coming out of cracks in the floor of the armory and sounded the alarm.

ROOF CRASHES

Firemen entering the basement to combat the blaze were overcome quickly. Within two hours the flames had mounted to the top of the armory, a four-story stone structure, and lighted up the whole city.

The roof fell with a crash and brands were scattered far and wide.

Panic spread through the neighborhood. One home was under quarantine for diphtheria. Householders standing on the roofs of their homes fought the brands with wet blankets and garden hose.

Records more than 100 years old were destroyed in the armory.

ARMED MINERS WAIT TROOPS IN WAR ZONE

300 National Guardsmen To Take Town Where 5 Have Died During Strife

HARLAN, Ky., May 7.—(AP.)—More than 300 National Guardsmen, equipped for battle, were quartered temporarily in the Harlan County armory this morning while their leaders conferred with civil authorities on plans for occupation of Evarts, nine miles away.

Under orders to take any steps necessary to restore law and order in a community torn with labor strife during the past few months, the officers expected to move into Evarts momentarily.

While these plans were under way, reports continued to reach Harlan of armed men perched atop houses in and around Evarts, apparently awaiting the troopers. All women and children have been moved out of Evarts, the reports said.

If World Pays For War It Can't Afford Another

—By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER—

International Chamber of Commerce thinks that abrogation of war debts will iron the wrinkles out of civilization.

It's a nice benevolent idea. But war debts are what stop wars. The Kaiser's trip to Holland wasn't the flight of a king so much as the scampering of an exhausted bank teller.

When he ran out of money, the war was over. And we must make the world pay for the last war to prevent it affording the next one.

At present every nation is an ostrich with its head in the sands of the past and its tail feathers being plucked by the future.

Do you think we enjoy asking for money? And not getting it? We do not. We only enjoy asking for dough when we get it.

We are all like the darky who was so ragged when he came to town he had to carry his money in his mouth. And there weren't enough coins to hurt his teeth.

Somebody hit him on the chin and he swallowed his capital. The same man punched him in the stomach and he coughed it up again.

He was glad enough to get it back without interest.

And it looks as if the United States is going through the same process. Only we are taking a worse beating.

MASKED MEN HALT CAR IN WEST VIEW, ROB PAIR

Operator, Passenger Victims In New Street Car Raid; Stolen Checks Returned

For the second time in less than 24 hours robbers early today held up a trolley, robbed the operator and one passenger and escaped in an automobile.

The second robbery came when two masked men boarded a West View-bound car at Quail lane, between West View and Bellevue, forced Michael Paxton, 42, of 1530 Federal street, motorman, and Abe Zotta, 23, of 375 Ambard avenue, Bellevue, the passenger, to leave the car, robbed them and escaped. Paxton lost $23 and his watch, and Zotta $6.

Mr. Zotta

The robbery occurred about the time North Side police found an automobile in front of 602 West Lacock street, believed used in the holdup yesterday of a street car in Mt. Oliver, when Charles Schafer, 76, treasurer of the Lyman Building and Loan Association, a passenger, was robbed of $1.12 in cash and $5,258.91 in checks.

FIVE ARRESTED

Five persons have been arrested and will be questioned in connection with the robbery.

Eight hours after the holdup in Mt. Oliver the robbers sent back the $5,258.91 in checks by special delivery mail. They kept the $1.12 in cash. In their haste the pair overlooked $2,002 which Schafer had in another pocket.

Those held at North Side Police Station said they were: Dolly Rhader, 35, 910 West Diamond street; H. J. Cook, 31, same address; Donald Cox, 29, 627 Emlin way; Joseph Conley, 22, 1117 McCandless street and 5201 Butler street, and James Conroy, 32, 213 McCandless street. Police say they found a special officer's badge and police box keys in Conroy's possession. Cook had $400 in pawn tickets in his possession and Cox was armed, police say.

TAKEN AT PARTY

The arrests were made during a party at 910 West Diamond street on an anonymous tip from a woman who said she had overheard the Rhader woman say:

"Just think what a chance Don took for me yesterday and then getting only a dollar and those checks."

Schafer and other passengers on the car will be called to the North Side Police Court in an effort to identify the suspects.

Reed Turns Down Hoover To Visit Friend

WASHINGTON, May 7.—(AP.)—Senator Reed has found friendship to be stronger than a call to duty even though the summons comes from the President of the United States.

Pennsylvania's senior senator turned down an invitation of President Hoover to become a member of the presidential party during the coming week-end at the President's fishing camp on the Rapidan, in Virginia, in order to keep a previous engagement with a friend.

Some time ago Reed promised F. L. Belin, of Waverly, Pa., to officiate at the dedication of a community house at Waverly, built as a memorial to Belin's parents.

Belin is an old friend of the Senator and, when the presidential invitation was extended, Reed went to the White House and asked to be excused from the party because of the previous engagement. Even though land armaments, in which Reed is interested as chairman of the Senate Military Affairs Committee, were to be discussed at the week-end conference, he said he could not break faith with Belin.

Marriage of Carol, Magda Seen in Helen's Exile

BUCHAREST, May 7.—(INS.)—Rumors that King Carol II of Rumania, was contemplating a morganatic marriage with Mme. Magda Lupescu, his companion during five years of exile in France, gained renewed circulation here today with the departure of Princess Helen, Carol's divorced wife, for Belgrade.

Princess Helen, who steadfastly refused to consent to a reconciliation with Carol because he left her in favor of Mme. Lupescu, and renounced his rights to the throne years ago, will take up permanent residence in Belgrade, according to current reports.

Her departure, carried out last night with utmost simplicity, was said to be the result of a secret conference Tuesday between Carol and King Alexander of Jugoslavia aboard the latter's yacht in the Danube.

It has been reported for some time that Carol was endeavoring to persuade Helen to leave the country and that she had virtually decided to do so when her son, Crown Prince Michael, was taken ill with diphtheria.

The fact she left Bucharest within 24 hours of the official announcement of Michael's recovery indicated she was prepared to bow to the King's wishes to quit the country.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., May 7.—(INS.)—Police seeking to solve the murder of Hazel Bradshaw, 23, former West Virginia girl, today were checking alleged discrepancies in the story of Moss E. Garrison, the girl's suitor, who is in custody.

Refutation of the statement that Garrison escorted Miss Bradshaw to her home and left her there after a visit to the movies last Saturday night was possibly provided by an assertion that a man resembling him walked alone out of the park in which the girl was stabbed 14 times.

A young man and a woman seated in an automobile near the park told police they saw a man "just like Garrison" leave the park alone. Their names were withheld.

Western Pennsylvania is still in the low pressure, and conditions are still favorable for showers this afternoon. A marked change to cooler occurred over the remainder of the Ohio Valley states, and the change will set in over this section this afternoon. Relatively high pressure over the plains states is attended by clear skies and cold weather. Heavy frost and freezing temperature occurred this morning over Iowa and northward, and light frost as far south as Fort Smith, Ark. NOBILE PRAISES GRAF'S FLIGHT TO POLE

Italian Arctic Explorer Sees Little Danger for Eckener Party on Journey

By GUGLIELMO EMANUEL
International News Service.

ROME, May 7.—Hearty approval of the plan for a rendezvous at the North Pole this summer by the German Graf Zeppelin and Sir Hubert Wilkins' submarine, the Nautilus, was voiced today by Gen. Umberto Nobile, noted Italian explorer and airship commander who twice flew over the North Pole in a dirigible. Gen. Nobile told International News Service in an exclusive interview:

"I consider the plan for cooperation between the submarine and the airship a most happy one.

SEES LITTLE RISK

"I am persuaded that the employment of the Graf Zeppelin on this enterprise is practically exempt from serious risks because of the considerable experience in flying in the Arctic regions now possessed by its commander and crew; also in view of the Graf's long experience and record in flying under all sorts of climatic conditions.

"I heartily approve of the Graf's co-operation on this expedition in view of the fact that the difficulties which the submarine may meet in attempting to reach the pole by traveling under the ice cap are still unknown, and the assistance of the Graf greatly enhances the safety of the submarine."

TWICE OVER POLE

Gen. Nobile said he was "tremendously interested" in the announcement by the Graf's commander, Dr. Hugo Eckener, yesterday that the Graf Zeppelin will fly to the polar regions about the middle of July to hold a rendevous with the Nautilus "at or near the North Pole."

Nobile commanded the Amundsen-Nobile-Ellsworth flight from Spitzbergen to Point Barrow, Alaska, in May, 1926, only a few days after Admiral Richard E. Byrd had successfully made the first airplane flight over the pole. His second polar flight was the ill-fated expedition in the dirigible Italia, in 1928, which resulted in the loss of the airship on the ice-cap soon after crossing over the pole, and the deaths of many members of the expedition.

HUSBAND SLAIN BY 'OTHER MAN'

DETROIT, May 7.—(AP.)—Maynard E. Reser, 32, of Dayton, O., was killed and Albert Payne, 27, of Covington, Ky., wounded late last night when, police say, they "shot it out" over attentions Reser accused Payne of paying to Mrs. Reser.

The Resers had been separated for several months. Payne told police he was seated beside Mrs. Reser on a sofa in the home where she was rooming when Reser entered and fired. Payne said he ran upstairs, got a pistol, and emptied it at Reser, who had followed him. Reser had accused him of alienating the affections of his wife, Payne said, and had threatened to kill him on sight.

Because of a letter found on Reser's body, Mrs. Reser was held by police. The letter was signed "Marie," Mrs. Reser's first name, and said, in part:

"Please don't make a murderer out of you. Oh, Mayne, please, for God's sake, let somebody else do it. You won't get by. I'm nearly crazy and all I can see is bars."

WORLD EXPERTS DRAFT TRADE AID PROGRAM

International Commerce Gathering Summarizing Ways to Mend Depression

WASHINGTON, May 7.—(AP.)—A general resolution summarizing the world economic situation and suggesting ways of improving it was in process of formulation today in a series of meetings of national committees of the International Chamber of Commerce.

Although differences of opinion were apparent, especially over suggestions for a continuing study of war debts in the light of the decline in commodity prices, Silas H. Strawn, chairman of the American section, said "everybody is working toward a common end and when it comes to a showdown, tomorrow or Saturday, there will be no differences of opinion."

He indicated all difficulties over phrascology of what he termed the "composite" resolution would be ironed out before the resolutions committee passed it on to the convention floor. He asserted:

"The question of war debts and everything else is still in the embryonic stage and there is no row."

President and Mrs. Hoover will receive the delegates at the White House late today and the congress banquet will be held tonight.

AIR EXECUTIVE ADVISES CLUB

Getting people out to the airport to be entertained by stunts is not making them airminded, Charles W. Loos, president of Curtiss-Wright Flying Service, told members of the Aero Club of Pittsburgh today.

The public must be brought to an everyday use of aerial facilities, just as with railroads and automobiles, he said.

Reviewing the effect of the depression on aviation, Mr. Loos said:

"We in the Curtiss-Wright organization today believe that we can best serve the public by catering to the individual needs of the private owner. We do not have the rosy hopes of 1928, that airplanes would soon be as popular as automobiles, but we believe the industry will 'come back' stronger and healthier than ever."

Coolidge Opposes Debt Cancellation as Subsidy

NORTHAMPTON, Mass., May 7.

To the Editor of The Sun-Telegraph:

Without considering at all the financial or moral obligation of foreign governments to pay their debts to our government or the obligation of our government to collect them, it is interesting to see what is involved in the argument that the debts should be cancelled to increase trade. Fundamentally this means the most enormous subsidy to foreign commerce that was ever proposed. This has a strange sound in the vocabulary of those who advocate that trade should be free and unrestricted. We would be involved in subsidizing the trade of foreign people out of money collected from our own people.

Mr. Coolidge

If this policy is to be adopted, if our taxpayers are to begin paying the taxes of foreign people supposedly in order to increase their power to trade with us, there is no reason to limit the process to those who happen to owe our government. The principle would require a broader application. It would be logical to select all countries where an argument could be made that if our Treasury would bear a part of their tax burden they might enlarge their commerce with us. If we adopted this principle logically we should open our Treasury to all the world.

CALVIN COOLIDGE.

WACO, Tex., May 7.—(AP.)—In a dying condition, Dr. S. P. Brooks, president of Baylor University for more than 20 years, has cheerfully set himself to the task of signing diplomas for this year's graduating class—his farewell to the student body.

In spite of warnings that his strength will be unduly sapped, the university president has completed the signing of 100 of the more than 400 diplomas to be issued. He insists he will continue until the task is completed or his strength fails him.

From his bed at the Central Texas Baptist Sanitarium, he sent a message of courage to the students yesterday. He said he realized the end was near, but wanted his students to "carry on."

27 GO ON STRIKE AT NEW P. O. BUILDING

Pile Drivers, Carpenters Walk Out in Dispute on Union Rules; Second Tilt

Twenty-five pile drivers and two carpenters, working on the foundation for the new federal building, Grant street and Seventh avenue, are on strike.

J. M. McMillen, a general field clerk, said the strikers, who quit work yesterday, had been replaced. He said the dispute arose when the pile drivers noticed two carpenters at work on a pile with a hack saw and disputed their right to such employment.

George Seibert, secretary of Pile Drivers and Dock Builders Local Union No. 2264, declared the walkout was due to failure of the contractor to remove non-union welders from the job.

A few weeks ago a number of structural iron workers were called off the foundation job and were replaced by pile drivers.

BABY TRAPPED IN WELL SAVED BY FIREMEN

1,000 Watch as Men, Urged On By Small Girl's Cries, Dig 25-Foot Shaft, Tunnel

GENEVA, Neb., May 7.—(AP.)—While more than 1,000 persons watched, Carroll Brower, 18-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Brower, was rescued last night by volunteer firemen from an abandoned well into which she had fallen. One leg was slightly bruised in her fall, but otherwise she apparently suffered no ill effects.

Working in shifts the firemen dug a shaft alongside the well two feet distant. They went down 25 feet and then tunneled to the bottom part of the well.

The girl's father had driven over the old well with a motor truck, causing a cave-in. The child toddled along after the truck and fell through the opening. The hole was not large enough to admit the body of an adult. First workers thought of letting down a rope, then they thought of letting down a boy, but the boys that could get through the hole were not big enough to do the job.

An occasional cry from the little girl urged the workers on as they dug the shaft.

LAST-MAN CLUB SOLE SURVIVOR RELIVES WAR

Carries Toast Wine on Trail Of Departed Comrades In Campaigns for Union.

WASHINGTON, May 7.—(AP.)—Charles W. Lockwood today came back to the battlefields where he fought 70 years ago.

It will go with him on his reminiscent pilgrimage—symbol of the 33 veterans of Company B, First Minnesota, whose chairs were draped in black last July 21 when 88-year-old Lockwood answered the last roll call and drank the last man toast.

SCORNS AID WITH GRIPS

That banquet was on the anniversary of Bull Run's first battle, the date on which it was held for 46 years, and Lockwood will go first to Bull Run in re-living the campaigns of his company.

He stepped off the train today with a heavy suitcase in each hand, refusing all offers of assistance.

Half-way up the long platform, his daughter, Mrs. George A. Duthie, whose husband is chief of the division of information of the United States forest service, found him and reporters started asking questions.

"Was that wine actually all right, or had it turned to vinegar when you drank the last man toast?"

WHISKY PREFERRED

Lockwood pulled the bottle from an inside pocket and offered it in turn to two reporters, saying:

"That's it! Taste it for yourself. Vinegar, umph! It's Burgundy—and good enough for Burgundy. But I've always thought it was foolish to have wine. It should have been good Irish whisky!"

And wine it was, a little flat, but tasty.

Cornell Urged to Honor Fallen Gunman Foe

ITHACA, N. Y., May 7.—(AP.)—Whether the name of Hans Wagner, who died fighting for Germany in the World War, will be added to the names of 264 other sons of Cornell on its war memorial to be dedicated May 23, was to be considered today by the university. President Hoover will take part in the dedicatory ceremony, speaking from the White House, according to announced plans.

Robert E. Tremean, chairman of the committee which raised $600,000 for the construction of the group of four buildings comprising the memorial, said he would confer with Livingston Farrand, president of the university, on the subject. His decision to take up the matter with the university head was prompted, he said, by the considerable discussion that had resulted from the publication in the Cornell Daily Sun, student publication, of an editorial urging that Wagner's name be added to the inscription. The editorial said:

"Hans Wagner was enrolled at Cornell in 1908-1909. He returned to Germany and died fighting for his fatherland in the World War. Yet his name is missing in the war memorial cloister which bears these words at its entrance:

"'On these walls are inscribed the names of those sons of Cornell who gave their lives in the World War.'"

Society Woman's Dry Plea Rejected by Labor

WASHINGTON, May 7.—(INS.)—Unmoved by the personal plea of Mrs. Rushmore Patterson, society woman, that they change their attitude, members of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor declared today they stand for the legal manufacture and sale of 2.75 per cent beer as voiced at their last convention.

Mrs. Patterson is a new member of the Citizens Protective League, a prohibition organization, and left her mansion here to speak before the federation's council at the latter's headquarters. She asked if it were wise for them to ask for beer when men and women need bread, and if it were fair to demand wine when shorter hours were the urgent requirement.

William Green, president of the federation, said the council told the society woman that the workingmen believe the manufacture and sale of beer would promote law and order, and temperance, and give employment to thousands of workers.

House Investigator Replies To Senator's Criticism Of 'One-Sided' Inquiry

HARRISBURG, May 7.—(AP.) — Representative D. Glenn Moore, Washington, chairman of the House Investigating Committee, today said that the hearings by the committee have been fair.

Answering the criticism of the House investigation made yesterday by Senator McClure, Delaware, at the Senate hearing on the fair rate board bills, Moore said the experts hired by the Governor gave testimony taken solely from the Public Service Commission's records.

In reply to the charge that the committee had heard only one side of the case, Moore declared:

"The Senator has not attended the hearings of this committee and his charges are utterly without foundation. He has been grossly misinformed.

"This committee has proceeded in an orderly manner to get the real facts in regard to the regulation of utilities in Pennsylvania. It has heard every witness who has asked to be heard. It has invited all members of the Public Service Commission to appear. Four of them, including the chairman, have accepted. The heads of all of the large electric systems operating in Pennsylvania have been invited and the heads of all but one system have accepted."

PINCHOT OPENS FAIR RATE TOUR

HARRISBURG, May 7.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot today set out on a tour with the announced intention of arousing the people of the state in the interests of his proposed legislation to abolish the Public Service Commission.

Riding in an open car with top down, and following several automobiles carrying newspapermen, the Governor left the capital before noon and headed for Montrose, home of Chairman W. D. B. Ainey, of the Public Service Commission, and home district of a member of the House and a state senator who have remained unpledged to his program.

Before he left, the Governor issued a statement saying this trip was undertaken in compliance with his pledge to use the full power of the governorship in the interest of abolishing the Public Service Commission and replacing it with a fair rate board that "will give the people a square deal."

CITY LOAN BILL EXPLAINED

Charles A. Waldschmidt, city solicitor, says there is no immediate emergency which would call for the city issuing short term notes in anticipation of taxes, but that such a power would insure the city's ability to handle the financial needs of the unemployment situation.

Waldschmidt has returned from Harrisburg where he went in the interests of a bill sponsored by Roy D. Schooley, city treasurer, and introduced by Senator William D. Mansfield, which would enable the city to borrow up to $750,000 a year with tax liens as security.

Schooley sees the bill as a constructive effort to make possible a reduction in taxes in 1932 by lifting some of the burden imposed by delinquent taxes from the shoulders of those who pay theirs promptly.

Real estate and building leaders are not enthusiastic concerning tax anticipation loans, but have refused to comment until copies of the bill are available.

CHARTER BILL ACTION LIKELY

HARRISBURG, May 7.—While hopes are dead that a city manager bill similar to the recently defeated Moore bill will be introduced in the Senate, proponents of local option and change in city government today were expressing the opinion that one of the charter commission bill would come out of committee eventually.

Two measures, buried in the Cities Committee for months, have been subjected to some agitation with the committee. It is understood that the Richards bill, submitted by Bart Richards, of New Castle, a Pinchot member, will not be sent on the floor, but that one by Mrs. Wilson, Socialist member, may reach the floor.

Both are parallel bills, and would permit the county commissioners to name a commission to submit a new charter for municipalities to the Legislature, in the event 20 per cent of the voters register their approval.

POLL TAX BILL APPROVAL SEEN

HARRISBURG, May 7.—The Coyne poll tax bills, which were recalled from the Governor and amended in the Senate yesterday, cannot be passed until next Tuesday, and will likely be signed by Gov. Pinchot that day or Wednesday, it was indicated today.

The measures, companion bills providing for the change in poll tax to a flat 50 cents, and the right to be assessed within two months of an election, suffered a slight change in the Senate, the ords "60 days" being supplanted by "two months," the latter demanded by the Constitution.

Senator Coyne predicted the Senate will pass the amended bills next Monday night when it reconvenes. The following day they can be sent to the House for conference, and late Tuesday or Wednesday, they should appear before the Governor for his approval, which, it is understood, will be given.

PINCHOT SIGNS DAM BILL

HARRISBURG, May 7.—(AP.)—Gov. Pinchot today signed the bill of Representative Hugh M. Stevenson, Mercer, appropriating $1,500,000 for the completion of the Pymatuning swamp dam project.

The completion of the dam will create the largest artificial lake in Pennsylvania. This project was first started in 1911 and already $1,354,036 has been spent in its development. Earlier in the week the Governor signed a bill providing for the fishing, hunting, recreational and park development in the area surrounding and including the proposed lake.

The lake will cover 16,420 acres in Crawford county, Pennsylvania, and Ashtabula County, Ohio. It will provide relief from floods in the fall and spring and from drought in summer, sponsors of the bill said, in the valleys of the Beaver and Shenango rivers, whose source is in the swamp.

REDISTRICTING SCRAMBLE ON

HARRISBURG, May 7.—A scramble for place in the new legislative redistricting, and some opposition to the Heffran bill from Allegheny County members was begun today, when the bill appeared on the calendar.

The bill, sent to the floor yesterday, provides that Allegheny County get an additional member, but it would change Dr. Joseph G. Steedle's district in the McKees Rocks section by taking away two city wards, and providing that a new district adjoining his have one member, while three members instead of four remain in the old district. M. A. Musmanno, M. A. Dunn, and F. C. Gangloff are the others in this group.

Sam Grenet, of the North Side, would be given a sector to himself, while William Stadtlander, at present sharing it with him, would be shifted over into that now represented by James P. Rooney and James Wettach.

Escaped Rockview Prisoner Hunted

BELLEFONTE, Pa., May 7.—(AP.)—State police and prison guards are searching the woods around Rockview Penitentiary for Raphael Paschel, 49, who escaped while painting the warden's residence. Paschel was sentenced in Somerset County for larceny.

CHICKEN THIEF SUSPECT SHOT

County Detective James Reddington early today arrested John E. Johnson, 42, a Negro, of Large, for shooting Steve Krinik, 40, also of Large, alleged to have been detected stealing chickens from Johnson's chicken coop.

Krinik was taken to the McKeesport Hospital, where it was said he was shot five times, twice in the right forearm and three times in the stomach. Johnson was being held at the McKeesport Police Station.

Reddington found a bag containing three chickens at the scene of the shooting, he said.

Thieves last night broke into the home of S. F. McKee, 73 North Harrison avenue, Bellevue, and took clothes and jewelry valued at $800.

Samuel Watt, of 277 Pacific avenue, reported to police early today he had been held up by a Negro in front of 5318 Friendship avenue and robbed of $15.

Boy Bandit Robs Chain Store Head

Relics from Ur Date Back to Abraham

LONDON, May 7.—(AP)—Religious sculptures nearly 4,000 years old have been brought to London by C. Leonard Woolley, who just returned from Ur of the Chaldes. There are important inscriptions and tablets which throw new light on the history and religion of people who lived about 2,000 B. C.

The most interesting objects in the collection, Mr. Wooley said, are sculptures of the time of Abraham, about 2,000 to 1,800 B. C.

All In A Day

By Mark Hellinger

NEW YORK, May 7.

SUCH THINGS can't happen, eh? Well, my friends, I'm giving you my personal guarantee along with this one. I don't know what good my personal guarantee really is, but I give it to you anyhow. That's the kind of a generous guy I've grown to be lately. At any rate—

Several years ago, when New York had a few more papers than it has today, the owner of a chain of newspapers decided that his New York sheet wasn't getting the proper results from its classified advertising section. This publisher was a man of action. And once his decision was made events developed at once.

"Fire our classified advertising manager at once," was his command, "and get the very best man in the business to replace him. I want some business in that section."

The representative reached for his phone and got his boss on the long-distance wire.

"I'll go to work on that immediately," he said. "But have you someone in mind for the job?"

The publisher barked his reply.

"That's your work," he returned. "Not mine. Whom do you recommend for the position?"

"Well," said the representative hesitatingly, "the man on the Morning Gazette is just about the best in the whole game. I—"

"Get him," interrupted the publisher. "If he's the best, that's the man I want. Sign him at once."

The representative was still a trifle dubious.

"But he's a big man," he murmured. "I don't know his name, but I do know that the Gazette's classified section is the very best in the city. He'll want a lot of money to come with us."

The next few words were final.

"Since when have I quibbled over money?" the publisher demanded. "Pay him anything he wants and get him right away. That's all." . . .

In the office of the Morning Gazette, Brown sat at his desk and waded through a mass of papers. The girl told him a man was outside to see him. Brown walked through the door.

"Sure," nodded Brown. "What can I do for you?"

The man told him the story in a very few words. Mr. S——, publisher of the Morning Blurb, wanted him to leave the Gazette and come to the Blurb. Would he be interested?

"Well," said Brown, "I might be. How much are you offering?"

"I'll tell you, Mr.——," he said. "By the way, what is your name?"

"Brown," replied the other man.

The representative snapped his fingers.

"Brown," he repeated. "Of course. How silly of me to forget. Well, I'll tell you, Mr. Brown. I can see I don't have to beat around the bush with you. The boss wants you. He will pay you $25,000 a year to become our classified advertising manager!"

Brown never even hesitated.

"Not enough," he declared. "Sorry."

He turned to go. The other man leaped after him.

"I'll raise it $10,000," he cried. "We'll pay you $35,000 a year to come with us."

"Make it $40,000," said Brown calmly, "and it's a go."

"It's a go," shouted the representative hastily. "Now what I want to do is to sign the contracts at once. If you'll come to our lawyer with me, I'll——"

"Nothing doing," smiled Brown. "You'll come over to see my lawyer and he'll draw the contracts."

Two hours later the deal was closed. Brown had been signed as the classified advertising manager of the Morning Blurb for five years at $40,000 a year. It was a dream of a contract. Brown was to have absolute charge of everything. Nothing was to go into his section without his okay. And so forth.

The two men shook hands and the representative rushed to his office to phone the publisher.

"I've landed our man," he cried exultantly over the phone. "$40,000 a year. He starts with us immediately."

"Good work," said the publisher . . .

About two weeks later the representative walked into Brown's palatial office in the Morning Blurb office. He looked troubled.

"Look here, Brown," he asserted, "you've been with us almost two weeks already and you haven't put one of your classified advertising systems into work yet. When do you expect to get busy?"

"Never," he returned. "I don't know any more about classified advertising systems than you do. You'd better sit down, my friend. You have a shock coming to you.

"I was the classified advertising manager of the Gazette only because the real manager was on his vacation for two weeks. As a matter of fact, I was the assistant city editor over there.

"When you offered me $25,000 without knowing my job was only a temporary one, I knew you'd go higher. You did. I have a contract with your organization for five years that I defy anyone to break. Would you like to try?"

The contract expired a few months ago. Brown is now retired and having a swell time in Europe. And the publisher's representative, I regret to say, hasn't been the publisher's representative for a long, long time . . . .

ACCIDENTS CUT BY NEW WALK

Construction of a cinder sidewalk along Mt. Royal boulevard from Undercliffe to the Zoar Home, started some time ago by the county Public Works Department, has been almost completed and already a decrease in the number of accidents along the highway has been noted, it was said today. The work was started through the efforts of Supt. Albert Lorch, of the second district of the Public Works Department, and of the Pittsburgh Motor Club.

The sidewalks have been finished as far as Glenshaw, and workmen are now completing walks between Glenshaw and the Zoar Home. It is the first highway walk, Motor Club officials said, to be built by county or township authorities following campaigns to obtain protection against automobile deaths and injuries.

That's going some—but skinny men, women and children just can't help putting on good, healthy flesh when they take McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Tablets.

FORMER BARON AMONG JOBLESS

WHEELING, W. Va., May 7.—The depression has struck the nobility.

Baron Saarosy

He's "Mr." Saarosy to hundreds of his friends in this district and in New York, where he came in 1879 when members of his family were assassinated, but to the Hungarian settlement he is still Baron G. Saarosy, descendant of rulers of the same name since 1356.

Said the Baron: "All kings and absolute rulers will some day be dethroned. King Alfonso of Spain was the latest. The move against the nobility started back in my time when I ruled a domain in Hungary. It will not end now."

WEBSTER HALL RECEIVERS SUE

Seeking to recover from Charles H. Rosenbloom, Alex Lowenthal and Arthur Rosenbloom, trading as Rosenbloom & Lowenthal, $242,960.42 alleged due the Webster Hall Corporation through a $750,000 stock deal, a suit was filed in Common Pleas Court by the Pennsylvania Trust Company and William M. Steenman, receivers of the corporation.

The claim is based on the alleged failure of the defendants to complete purchase of 7,500 shares, par value $750,000, of 7 per cent preferred stock of the Webster Hall Corporation for $700,000 under an agreement of March, 1927. They accepted 5,000 shares in four monthly deliveries of 1,250 from May to August, 1927, inclusive, as agreed, according to the suit, which averred that only $37,054.81 was paid on the September allotment of 1,250 shares. The defendants refused the final allotment in October, 1927, the suit alleged.

DINNER CLOSES STORE CONTEST

Eating "crow" a special menu minus table tools was the punishment for the losing May-Liggett Drug Company team at the company banquet at the Fort Pitt Hotel last night.

More than 40 store managers and executives with their wives attended the dinner, half of the men, the winning team, were served a full course dinner while the losers, attired in dunce caps and butcher's aprons, ate a special meal without benefit of silverware. The two teams were separated from each other by chicken wire. R. E. Lansbery captained the winners, H. H. Ryland, the losers.

Surplus Weight Melted Away in your own Bath

It is easy to reduce the Fayro Way. Just allow the delicately scented Fayro mineral salts to dissolve while you relax in the privacy of your bath at home. Fayro dissolves subsurface fats, opens clogged skin pores and rids them of imbedded dirt and poisons.

It is as simple as that. There is no need for ruinous, health-breaking diets or body-wracking exercises. No need to take doubtful preparations that lessen your resistance.

The Fayro formula, which contains nothing harmful to the skin or body, duplicates the healthful, invigorating bath of natural mineral springs. Follow the directions with each package of Fayro and immediate results are guaranteed.

From Mt. Clemens, Mich., a city famous for its health springs, comes a letter from Dr. A. H., who orders more Fayro Bath Salts, and says, "Have recommended it highly to several patients. Results, as I have found, have invariably helped those who have sincerely tried."

This is one of the hundreds of letters* from physicians and enthusiastic users everywhere. Another from Miss J., of Tampa, Fla., declares, "It is the most wonderful treatment I know. I lost nine pounds and feel so much better.

"I am so thankful that I am reducing so that I can go out and look nice like other people."

Fayro is sold on an unconditional guarantee that if you are dissatisfied for any reason your money will be instantly refunded. More than a million and a half treatments have been sold on this guarantee. You risk nothing in giving it a fair trial.

One dollar at drug stores and toilet counters everywhere.

*Write for copy of sworn statement before Notary Public that no testimonial for Fayro has ever been solicited or paid for in any way. Fayro, Inc., North Side, Pittsburgh.

Fayro REDUCING BATH SALTS

MANY people began using Kleenex on the advise of doctors. Others, because their own feelings revolted at the use of a damp and soiled handkerchief.

Kleenex is a delicate tissue, so low in cost that you discard it after a single use. No used handkerchief touches your face, to expose your nose and throat to germs and possibly disease. You select each time a new tissue—exquisitely clean, fresh—and softer than old linen.

The use of Kleenex does away with unpleasant handkerchief washing. It is a great saving of money where washing is done commercially.

Kleenex is ideal for children. For office workers. For use during colds and hay fever. Try Kleenex just once, and the old-time handkerchief will seem impossible.

Kleenex comes in smart, modern boxes, at 25c, 50c and $1. At drug, dry goods and department stores.

Bacteriological Tests Show:

1. That handkerchiefs used by persons having colds may contain as many as 4,170,000 bacteria per handkerchief.
2. That organisms representative of those associated with colds, when impregnated upon linen and rinsed in boiling water and soap water, were not killed nor appreciably inhibited from growing.

TRAFFIC SIGNAL CONTROL URGED

(This is the seventh of a series of articles on proposed changes in the Pennsylvania motor code, now pending before the Legislature. The stories were prepared by the Pittsburgh Motor Club for the Sun-Telegraph.)

Legislation now before the House and Senate at Harrisburg would amend the state motor code to give the state Department of Highways complete control over all traffic signs, thus eliminating many of the superfluous stop-and-go signals now operative in many small municipalities on main thoroughfares.

The changes proposed in the code are:

1—That the Department of Highways shall have authority over the installation, location, operation and, when necessary, the removal of all signs, signals and markings on state highways, no matter in what municipality they may be located.

2—The Department of Highways shall have the power and duty of removing, altering or adjusting any signs, signals or markings which do not conform with its regulations.

3—The Secretary of Highways shall have the authority to cause the removal of all colored or flashing light signs, or other lights or signals, so located as to interfere with traffic or to be confused with or to obstruct the view or effectiveness of official signs, traffic signals or markings.

BLAZE IN HOME FOR CHILDREN

The first floor of the Industrial Home for Crippled Children, 1426 Denniston avenue, was filled with smoke early last night when a canvas used by painters caught fire in the basement of the building, a three-story brick structure.

The fire was discovered by Miss Alma Miller, secretary of the home, who called the fire department, and with other officials of the home made a quick search of the building to make certain that all the children were out.

WITHOUT CALOMEL

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to Go

If you feel sour and sunk and the world looks punk, don't swallow a lot of salts, mineral water, oil, laxative candy or chewing gum and expect them to make you suddenly sweet and buoyant and full of sunshine.

For they can't do it. They only move the bowels and a mere movement doesn't get at the cause. The reason for your down-and-out feeling is your liver. It should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily.

If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You have a thick, bad taste and your breath is foul, skin often breaks out in blemishes. Your head aches and you feel down and out. Your whole system is poisoned.

It takes those good, old CARTER'S LITTLE LIVER PILLS to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." They contain wonderful, harmless, gentle vegetable extracts, amazing when it comes to making the bile flow freely.

But don't ask for liver pills. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills. Look for the name Carter's Little Liver Pills on the red label. Resent a substitute.

Soothe Your KIDNEYS—then You'll Sleep Fine!

If burning kidney and bladder passages get you out of bed a dozen times a night, rob you of rest, weaken your health—don't use cheap harmful remedies. Instead, SOOTHE the kidneys and bladder the right way.

Santal Midy spreads a coat of antiseptic oil inside these irritated organs and so helps Nature to help you. Don't wait until it is too late. Kidney diseases cause over 113,000 deaths annually. Take tasteless Santal Midy now. Favorably known by doctors and druggists.

WARN AGAINST BOGUS CHECKS

East End and Wilkinsburg merchants were warned by Police Inspector Bernard Kirley today to watch for bogus payroll checks now being passed in that district. The first one to come to light, Kirley said, was for $32.50 and cashed by the manager of a chain store on Trenton avenue.

Kirley said the check had "Payroll Account" printed in one corner and was signed by the treasurer of a fictitious company.

All Aboard for Nowhere

By ARTHUR 'BUGS' BAER

Newest thing in ocean travel is the week-end liner out of New York Harbor. You go on the boat Friday and escape Monday.

Four days on the ocean, very little of it inside the 12-mile limit and most of it unconscious.

Your friends are on the wharf waving goodbye. They don't wave very sincerely because they know it's no use. They know you'll be back. But what can they do about it?

In the old days when you waved bye-bye to a pal on a boat there was some sense to it. Travel was dangerous, boats were small and seas were at the peak of prosperity.

If he never came back, which often happened, it vindicated your judgment. You hadn't wasted a farewell wave.

You require no passport for the trip and very little reason. Just get on the boat, sail around on the deep end of the ocean and come back again.

Nobody can ask where you were because you weren't anywhere. The liner touches no ports, no islands and no continents. Nobody searches your clothes for smuggling because they know there ain't nothing in your clothes but you. And you ain't important.

The advantages of the trip seem to be mostly liquid. Once aboard the lugger, and outside the 12-mile superstition, you are on your own. The revenue agents can't climb up the boat because the sides have been soaped.

We don't claim these four-day trips are for the purpose of bending the long-forgotten elbow. But we do claim that they are not for science and research nor for extracting iodine from seaweed.

The effervescent wine and the equally carbonated bromo seem to be the main dish on these voyages. If we are wrong you will be the recipient of the usual circular apology. We now get our apologies in postcard form, thereby saving that extra penny postage.

No trunks, no road maps and no worrying about trains. It is a pleasure trip without details. And with a stock ticker on board you are in a strategic spot to jump when the market turns sour as markets do at times.

It's the upkeep that costs.

The arrest was made on complaints of neighbors, Chief of County Detectives George W. Murren said. He will be given a hearing before Alderman George S. Anderson tomorrow.

Fire Destroys Home, Family Destitute

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., May 7.—(AP.)—For the second time within five years, the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Layman, of Stouffer, near here, was destroyed by fire yesterday. Local relief agencies said they were left penniless and asked for aid for them.

Pimples Scaled Over Disfiguring Face. Healed by Cuticura.

"When I was fifteen years of age my face became covered with pimples and blackheads. The pimples were large and red and appeared in blotches. They itched and when I scratched them they scaled over and looked very badly, disfiguring my face. The irritation was worse when I got warm.

"I tried other remedies about a year but without results. I sent for a free sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and they helped me. I purchased more and in about a month and a half I was healed." (Signed) (Miss Verna Price, 6612 Edmund St., Tacony, Phila., Pa., Jan. 11, 1930.

Soap 25c. Ointment 25 and 50c. Talcum 25c. Sold everywhere. Sample each free. Address: "Cuticura Laboratories, Dept. H, Malden, Mass."

By GEORGE SEIBEL

When the regular season wanes, even Pittsburgh becomes a one-night stand. Yesterday at the Nixon we had a glimpse of Mollie Picon, the Yiddish actress who is a most important personage in New York City, where she has a theater of her own bearing her name.

George Seibel

Mollie appeared in an operetta called "The Love Thief," which almost tells its plot in its title. It sounds quite Hollywoody and Ina Clairish. But it is almost like a peep at an alien land—making us realize anew that our America is the melting pot of all sorts of nationalities and religions.

Why bother your head with such matters when there's Mollie Picon to amuse you? This woman has a personality that is more than art. She dominates her stage—she pulls the strings and her audience laughs—she is as individual and genuine as Ethel Waters in her way.

In this operetta she is the daughter of an old thief just back from Sing Sing. She's in love with an artist, and the family is in consternation that she's going to marry an honest man. But the artist has a model, who tries to spoil the match; and there's a gentleman gangster who tries to make Mollie his. It's all solved when the comic pickpocket turns out to be a detective and captures the villain.

Mollie is a gifted comedienne with a good voice. Her explanation of the Einstein theory is as good as the Gravedigger's definition of suicide. And her dance in which she impersonates everybody at the wedding is capital.

Besides her there are Leon Gold and Lucy Levin with fine voices in a cast that is very good from first to last.

MEET LOUISA ALCOTT

And Saturday afternoon we are to have a brief visitation of another sort—Louisa Alcott's famous book, "Little Women," in dramatic form, also at the Nixon.

When William A. Brady first put on this drama of adolescense about 20 years ago, no one would have guessed that it would make a hit. But it did. And then, of course, everybody knew why.

The reason why still is in operation. It is explained in a booklet just issued by the Henry C. Frick Educational Commission, on "What Pittsburgh Junior High School Pupils Read." An investigation by Anne Campbell Rinehart reveals that the favorite book of 5,510 boys and girls is "Treasure Island." Next comes "Ivanhoe," "The Call of the Wild" and "Tom Sawyer." Then in fifth place is Louisa Alcott's classic, which is the preference of seven boys and 802 girls.

The same author's "Old Fashioned Girl" is in twentieth place, and "Little Men," a sequel, in twenty-second place. Surely this is significant, for Louisa Alcott has been dead nearly 50 years.

Meg and Jo and Beth and Amy are sure of a large and appreciative audience when they reappear here on Saturday afternoon.

CONVENTION OF MAGIC

Among other activities of early summer is the annual convention of magicians, which takes place this year at Columbus, O., June 3-5. The International Brotherhood of Magicians numbers almost 5,000 prestidigitators, professional and amateur, every one of whom tries to get to the convention, to find out what new mysteries have been discovered in the Black Art.

A week earlier there is a national conference of the Society of American Magicians at Philadelphia, May 28-30. These two get-togethers will be attended by hundreds of necromancers, showing that the ancient art of deception still flourishes in its most innocent form.

At Columbus there will be exhibitions of magic every evening in the Southern Theater, with performers from all over the United States. One afternoon there will be a performance for magicians only, when they will explain their mysteries to one another and the profane multitude will be excluded.

Instead of a parade there will be a magical exposition in the Capitol Square. There will also be amateur contests of all sorts—egg tricks, coin tricks, card tricks, silk tricks, etc. About 30 members of Pittsburgh Ring No. 13 will go to Columbus.

John Barrymore May Play In Talking Version of 'Jekyll and Hyde'

By HARRISON CARROLL

(Copyright, 1931, by Premier Syndicate)

HOLLYWOOD, May 7.

No better proof of the Paramount-Warner truce could be asked than the fact that B. P. Schulberg is trying to borrow John Barrymore for the talkie version of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde."

This is the most natural thing in the world, because John scored his first screen hit in the silent version of Stevenson's story. That was back in 1921.

John Barrymore

While Warners admit that negotiations are on, they say that nothing can be decided until Barrymore returns from his current fishing trip. This ought to be in about a fortnight.

Of course it is foolish to predict anything at such an early date. One can only hope that the two companies will get together on a swell idea for a picture. With Barrymore playing his original roles, and with the public's growing taste for weird stories, "Dr. Jeckyl and Mr. Hyde" ought to pack theaters from Hollywood to Timbucktu.

GREAT AMBITIONS

All of us have surpressed desires. El Brendel wants to be the ghost of a phantom lover.

LATEST GOSSIP

The midsummer dance of filmdom's Mayfair Club will be held at Malibu Beach, as was rumored in this column some time ago. It will be an informal affair, held in a specially constructed dance pavilion. The whole colony plans to celebrate open house that night . . . Ann Harding's new plane will be apple-green and will have her name engraved on the doors. By a mechanical gadget, the seats may be turned back to form beds . . . Mary Brian's swansong at Paramount will be Max Marcin's play "Silence." She plays opposite Clive Brook . . . After swearing off golf, Tom Meighan is taking lessons again . . . Not being able to get away to attend the universal convention in Atlantic City, Jr. Laemmle is making a two-reel talkie to be exhibited to the assembled delegates. Lazy voyages on freighters may be all right for Claudette Colbert and Norman Foster, but Chester Morriss is through with them. He was 31 days from Los Angeles to Hamburg. On the first day out, Chester and an Englishman started ot play deck tennis. By the last day aboard, Chester says, they were batting the balls viciously back, trying to hit each other in the head.

Portrait of a Man Talking to Himself

They were telling me that if I visited the same towns I hoofed in 10 years ago I wouldn't recognize them . . . The streets have been paved, it seems . . . The traffic now is as great a problem as it is here . . . Beautiful temples of amusement have replaced the honky-tonks . . . The only thing the same is the typical Greek restaurant . . . I preferred the one-arm lunch salons . . . Where if the guy behind the counter knew you were playing "at the Orpheum," he punched your ticket for 40 cents, even if you ate a dollar's worth of vittles . . . Then you tipped him 15 cents . . . All the rackets are not in the Big Cities . . . The letters that interest me most are those that come from these heart-bruised adolescents . . . That one from M. J., frixample . . . Would I please, please, please not fail her? . . . And publish her verse? . . . "I know it isn't any good," she wrote, "but he is sure to see it! He always reads you!" . . . He would know then, she said, how miserable she was, and perhaps he would give in . . . "I can't get up the nerve," she added, "to phone or write him. It would make me cry before I could get the words out—" . . . Poor thing . . . She is 18, she said . . . Reminds me of that grand line in that well-written torch song . . . Something about pride being love's greatest enemy.

I do hope Lew Leslie has already used the pruning stiletto on his new and often enjoyable revusical, "Rhapsody in Black" . . . There is so much in it that is tip-top that the unimportant items make it seem only so-so . . . But it isn't so-so, at all . . . He has tried to be different on Broadway, and while most of the spectators appreciate his ambitious effort, there were a goodly number there who found it depressing . . . When Leslie produced his "Blackbirds" every critic threw scallions at it . . . But it ran over a year.

The first speakeasy after prohibition must have been a wild spot . . . It was spellbinding stuff hearing about it the other night. . . . On 45th Street it was . . . Between Broadway and 6th . . . "What do you think?" asked the owner of it at the time, "you think we had locked doors like they have now—with peep-holes to see who wants to come in?" . . . The place, he said, had swinging doors typical of the old-time saloon . . . The bar was a long one and there never was elbow-room . . . They never risked a pinch by having the hooch in view, however . . . They were too clever for the reveneurs . . . Near the bar was a long coat rack, and dangling from the hooks were two dozen coats . . . In each pocket were plenty of miniature-sized bottles containing the best firewater . . . If you asked for gin, the bartender dug his paw into a black raincoat for it . . . Rye? . . . He dug into a brown overcoat . . . Vermouth? . . . Scotch? . . . Into the gray coat, or the blue one, or the yellow one, etc. . . . What an idea! . . . Once federal agents stormed in, and everybody swallowed their hooch hurriedly . . . And then hastened out . . . An investigation revealed no evidence. . . . "Your customers," said an agent as he left in disgust, "were in such a hurry, they forgot to take their overcoats, eh?" . . . "Yeah," said Larry Fay, the owner.

Some people can get on the front pages in the sensational manner and live to see picture postcards of the homes in which they were born! . . . That's the way they honor one native of Tarentum, Pa., according to a tiny postcard that arrived this morning. . . . The souvenir card contains a photo of a shack there, and the caption reads: "Birth Place of Evelyn Nesbit Thaw!" . . . Of all things! . . . The editor of that Detroit tab must have felt his cheeks get red the other day when he saw that frightful boner in his rag . . . About the party for the football stars . . . The list of speechmakers included the name of the late Rockne . . . I like that suggestion for a new name for Michigan boulevard in Chicago—"Machingun Boulevard" . . . Hehehe . . . Leave it to W. R. W., of that famed theatrical club, to come to its rescue when he can . . . I mustn't print his name or the name of the club, they said . . . He has done so much for it, but the actors aren't to be blamed for its failure . . . So few of them can afford to pay their dues . . . The other 11:45 p. m. the electric company phoned and threatened to turn off all the juice unless the overdue account was settled by midnight . . . He begged the voice to hold the offices open for another 20 minutes, allowing him time to get there with his personal check . . . I wonder if any of the members know that he was the one—and if they care?

The more I think about it the more I believe that a guy can lose a quarter of a million dollars by merely standing up against a bar . . . That chap did it who, they say, was one of the town's wealthiest bookmakers at the local tracks before the advent of prohibition . . . He spent $25 a day buying those two-for-a quarter drinks in the better places—but when prohibition arrived, and the same laughing coup was peddled at six-bits a convulsion, he kept buying the stuff for himself and the mob . . . Just a good guy, it seems . . . And now he is as "rich" as a Wall Street broker . . . They point him out to you these midnights in the 46th Street spots. . . . Always grinning and affable . . . He never asks his friends to buy him a shot . . . He hasn't come to that . . . But there he is—waiting until someone comes in who Knew Him When . . . His favorite expression is: "It is a painful thing to admit that so many good people are uninteresting and so many interesting people are so good" . . . But he has a good face . . . I like to look at it . . . Who was it said: "A good face is a letter of recommandation?"

I like Frisco's serious (for a change) observation on Chaplin—that England wants to make Cholly a Knight, but that America made him a millionaire . . . Nick the Greek was plenty annoyed the other yawning . . . Because one of the rags asserted that he often tossed the aggravating cubes in the dice houses with Rothstein and "Legs" Diamond . . . The Greek said that Diamond never played in a dice game with him; and to make matters worse, the sheet ran an alleged photo of him . . . "What's the matter?" asked Nick. "Ain't you fellers got any good pictures of me?" . . . He said he was going to call up the editor and tell him how wrong the story was, but that he just couldn't make trouble for anybody. . . . "It might lose a job for some guy. I wouldn't like that," he said . . . Then the subject switched to nicknames . . . Capt. Hawkes is called "the human bullet," so one lad suggested that so long as "Legs" Diamond wouldn't go out of focus after all those slugs, he ought to be named "the human sieve." . . . My favorite is "On His Last Legs" Diamond.

PERFECTS FILM TO AID SCIENCE

The development of motion picture apparatus magnifying its objects 200,000 times on a 10-foot screen was described by Heinz Rosenberger, of the Rockefeller Institute for Medical Research in a lecture on "Microcinematography as an Aid to Medical Research," at West Penn Hospital last night.

Mr. Rosenberger

Rosenberger told of his efforts to develop equipment as an aid to research in the study of physical aspects of bacterial life, in blood cells and animal tissues. He finally succeeded, he said, in constructing apparatus which photographed the Brownian or colloidal movement by means of reflection from a high-powered arc lamp.

Photographing of blood corpuscles, an aid in studying their physical structure, was another attainment of which Rosenberger spoke.

OLD GOLDS were created to give you THROAT-EASE . . . as well as a more delightful tasting cigarette. But the makers also considered your breath, your lips, your teeth, as well as your THROAT.

They created a pure-tobacco cigarette . . . free of coriander and other greasy artificial flavorings* that burn into clinging, staining, breath-tainting vapors.

To avoid unpleasant aftermaths, smoke pure-tobacco OLD GOLDS. Their clean, sun-ripened, natural-flavored tobaccos will be like honey to your THROAT. And they leave no objectionable odors either on your breath or clothing, or in the room.

HERE'S THE PROOF*

Open up a pack of OLD GOLDS and smell the tobacco. Do the same with any other cigarette. Judge for yourself which has the natural, pleasant, all-tobacco aroma. It's a favor to your family and friends, as well as to yourself, to smoke NATURAL-FLAVORED, pure-tobacco OLD GOLDS.

NEW BUILDING TO AID JOBLESS

Several hundred of Pittsburgh's unemployed will get work through the new $250,000 building project of the Palace Credit Company, 623 Liberty avenue, it was announced by officials today. The organization, expanding to include 619 and 621 Liberty avenue, started remodeling work on Tuesday. The work will be completed about September 10.

Officials of the company said today:

"We have specified to our contractors that only Pittsburgh labor and materials are to be used in the new addition to our building. We are acting on the advice of the Chamber of Commerce and President Hoover to build now, and have decided on this expenditure in 1931 instead of waiting until next year. We shall be able to give employment to more than 200 additional salespeople and office workers."

TECH MARKSMEN TO GET TROPHY

SIDEWALKS of PITTSBURGH

By William Pfarr

William Pfarr

Every so often (if we must be specific), Attorney Maurice Nernberg, the handwriting expert, and his colleague, Counsellor Robert Abel, get together and warble a moaning blues dedicated to the passing of the minstrel show. Where and why, these professional cross-examiners cross-examine, has the minstrel departed?

The professional minstrel has died a lingering death, but the amateur not only lingers on but flourishes. Abel will bear us out in this, because for an avocation he produces amateur minstrels. He points out that the minstrel is the ideal form of entertainment for the ubiquitous amateur, because the director can toss a hundred or so of them on the stage—in other words, there's a seat for everybody in the club and more friends to come and see their idols on the stage.

Abel can't understood why the professional minstrel show couldn't stand the gaff. Perhaps because the minstrel was always clean, perhaps because it had no pretty gals, perhaps because it wasn't sophisticated, perhaps because the pre-show parades were banned because of traffic conditions.

Those parades were all right. The whole troupe paraded around town, ended up at the theater and gave a half-hour's free show on the street.

The minstrel was pretty much like the circus—if you saw one you saw 'em all. There were Ham and Bones, those wide-mouthed end men, Mistah Interlocutah and, needless to admit, the fair-haired tenor who sang "When Irish Eyes Are Smiling" and "Mother Machree."

So far as we know, not one big minstrel troupe is on the road today. Gone are Neil O'Brien ("Think twice before you speak, then talk to yourself"), Al Fields and Lew Dockstader.

A stickler for accuracy, Judge Rowand furnishes the correct report of Marty Oliver's latest critique of bench and bar. We did not go far enough when we quoted Marty as saying that bad ballplayers and judges were alike because both were benched. To the Editor, Sun-Telegraph:

Uncle Andy Mellon don't blather at these luncheon club fiestas very often, and when he does things ain't looking so good, and he is sent in as a pinch hitter to bat for confidence. But even him they couldn't get to promise us much. He did say that things were worse in '73. Now, if we can get much nourishment out of that, let's do it. Course, Mr. Mellon feels mighty bad over his books not balancing for the first time in years. We are just nine hundred million in the red, so you can't blame him very much for not feeling any too pert. Think of how you'd feel if you counted up at night and found you was nine hundred million short.

(This famous story has been made into a talking picture by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer with Marion Davies in the leading role.)

CHAPTER I.

In the long reaches of what had become chronic insomnia John G. Rarick found himself mentally mouthing to himself phrases such as this: I am a rich man. I am a very rich man. Me, John G., rich!

Even in a land where such annals of achievement as textbooks and success magazines were crowded with the names of those who had vaulted from petty beginnings into high places, there was something about the rapid phantasmagoria from obscurity to rapid success that never failed to tax Rarick's credulities.

Now, Jenny Rarick, lying there beside him in the elaborate marquetry bed, the first piece of signed furniture, by the way, which they had acquired, had less imagination to startle with the fecundity of events. She had a capacity to take for granted many of the phenomena of the world in which she lived.

A sunset was something to admire, but not to wonder about.

She had once remarked to a poet of no small repute, that she regretted she had never found time to become a writer.

Yet it was obviously a nervous woman lying there asleep beside Rarick. The face, always too angular for beauty, was constantly ridden across with expressions, as if, while the body slept, the mind kept open shop.

Above the fine coverlet her shoulders, narrow white ones, with firm breasts that had not sagged from child-bearing, rose and fell to irregular breathing. Here was some one asleep with much on her mind.

Victim of Insomnia

With Rarick the difference lay in his not being able to sleep at all. As a boy, back on his stepaunt's farm, 20 miles out of Keokuk, he had known the torments of insomnia, coming in, time after time, from a long back-splitting day in the fields, to lie sleepless for hours after he had sought his bed.

His room then had been an unfurnished attic, with a window set into a slanting roof, stars had gleamed into his insomnia through that window.

Stars gleamed into his insomnia now. They were gilt, hand-wrought ones, against a ceiling of billow, cherub and streamer, done after the manner of Tiepolo's Labia Palace painting of "Antony and Cleopatra."

No subject was too casual to tempt his insomnia. He built empires and warehouses by night. He dreamed into flooding darkness of achieving his nine-hundred-and-sixty-first store, of possessing the Gutenberg Bible, of tin tacks, of beholding with his own eyes, in his own conservatories, the opening of a passion-flower. Into that darkness he designed window displays, calculated floor space, inaugurated Eskimo pie for his soda fountains, and coveted a lode-stone ring from Clusium, the ancient capital of the Etruscians.

Across his relentless insomnia there stalked contemplations of new sites for new Five and Tens. Insolent sites within shadow of Hellenic marble libraries and along boulevard frontage; more and more Rarick temples to tin tacks, paper napkins, hooks and eyes, sink-swabbers, and paste jewelry mounted on pasteboard and sold in bins.

MARION DAVIES . . . PLAYING THE LEAD IN "FIVE AND TEN"

Miss Davies, the film star who takes the role of "Jennifer Rarick" in the film "Five and Ten," from the story by Fannie Hurst, which starts in the Sun-Telegraph today on this page.

Family Problems

His way of sleeping over a matter was to lie sleepless over it. A chain of six hundred and forty-two stores might virtually be said to have crocheted itself out of these hours of enforced contemplations. Problems of population of a given town, types and habits of the people, study of main industries, bank deposits and clearings, number of different industries, proportion of workers to clerks, of women employes to men, prevailing local rental conditions, had been pondered to their minutia from the flat of his back.

The problems of Jenny, now, or of his small son, Avery, or his daughter, Jennifer, were another matter. They made him restless and unable to concentrate. The fact that approximately 8 per cent of all candy sales in America are made to men was a reasonable hypothesis on which to work out a system of extensive candy departments in those stores which drew their business from the wholesale districts.

The fact, however, that Jenny's nervous dissatisfactions with the gratifications of today, in order that she might yearn for those of tomorrow, seemed to increase in just such proportion as her creature-cares decreased, was an unreasonable hypothesis, upon which to base nothing.

How dissatisfiedly she slept, two perpendicular lines flashing in and out between her eyes. Her strong hooked nose flashed slightly, too, at the nostrils, and in the pale light from a transom, the triangular planes of her cheeks, far too thin, rippled now and then. There was something of a frail, pale Dante about the sleeping face of Jenny. A face that walked in hell.

Wife Presents Problem

What was it she wanted? Strange angular woman whom he called wife, lying there sharing his bed, what is there that will ease your hunger, slake your thirst, gratify your indomitable appetites. Appetites for what? God knows! Love? Bah! she was as empty as a meal-sack of it for him, yet she was not the woman to seek it elsewhere. Up to now, hers had been the easy morality of the frigid.

What did she want? She had her children, as much as one seemed to have one's children nowadays.

What did she want? She had the security that goes with a 15-year-old marriage that has borne the fruit of offspring and material success. Indeed, a material success that taxed the credulities. As to the underlying gratifications of the pas-

More than 250 Jewish leaders of Pittsburgh attended a testimonial dinner in honor of Harry J. Applestein, for 20 years president of the Y. M. & W. H. A., in the clubhouse of the association last night.

A list of 300 new members, enrolled in a campaign drive arranged as a tribute to the president, and a set of 32 books were presented Applestein by Edgar J. Kaufmann, toastmaster.

Applestein was instrumental in organizing the "Y" when he was 17, the association being formed in the Tree of Life Synagogue, with Applestein as president. Except for a short time while he was with the American forces in France, he has retained the office.

Besides Kaufmann, speakers were Herman Passamaneck, executive director of the association; Harry L. Glucksman, of New York, executive director of the Jewish Welfare Board; Dr. Samuel H. Goldenson, of Rodef Shalom Congregation; Irvin F. Lehman, chairman of the dinner; Rabbi Herman Hailperin and Rabbi Benjamin Lichter.

52 YEARS ON TROLLEYS!

MOTORMAN-CONDUCTOR W. C. SHELDON . . . RUNNING HIS CAR

Mr. Sheldon, 64, Plummer Street Carhouse trolley man who tomorrow will be given the Bylesby Fifty-Year emblem in recognition of his 52 years' service for Pittsburgh railways companies.

Etna Motorman, 52 Years In Street Car Service, To Get Gold Medal

W. C. Sheldon, 64, 224 Second street, Etna, motorman, will take home with him tomorrow the Bylesby 50-year emblem of faithful work for the Pittsburgh Railways Company and its predecessors.

Officials of the railways company will present it to him tomorrow morning. They will review his service covering the periods from horse car to air-braked trolleys.

Sheldon will think back to the days yellow straw littered the floors of the horse car. He will remember the pungent smell of oil from the lamps it was his duty to clean every day, to keep in order for the old Transfer Line, running out Penn avenue to Thirtieth street.

He will remember when, as a boy of 15, he took his first car and team out over the line, proud motorman. How cable cars came into vogue shortly after. He will remember the day he saved a crowded car from an onrushing passenger train by driving through safety gates a split-second before the approach of the rumbling engine.

James G. Blaine and Grover Cleveland; Boise Penrose, William Taft, Roosevelt and Coolidge; the growth of Pittsburgh's mills, the Homestead steel strike, the Johnstown flood. Sheldon will remember them.

Tomorrow Sheldon will take a modern electric car out of the Plummer street car barns and run over the Sharpsburg route, proud in the possession of the coveted 50-year medal.

He will see the auto and the bus encroaching, little by little, on the electric railroad. He will wonder if his health, which he ascribes to plenty of sleep and a little beer, before prohibition, will hold out until the end comes. And he will stand ready to serve until mellowing old age brings on retirement time.

Two Places Raided On Girl's Testimony

They were arrested by county detectives in raids made on testimony of Edna Steiner, of Carey way, South Side, in Criminal Court, yesterday, when she appeared against Ralph Romano, of Burrows street.

Suicide Succeeds In Second Attempt

Floyd S. Conrath, 41, of 316 North St. Clair street, killed himself by firing a bullet into his head in the bathroom of his home last night, the coroner's office reported.

In a note left to his wife, Conrath said he planned to kill her and then himself when he bought the revolver Tuesday, but changed his mind because of his great love for her. Conrath, who had been out of work two weeks, attempted to asphyxiate himself in his home Sunday, but was frustrated by his wife, she told police.

The exhibition of 29 paintings from the Chester Dale Collection, New York City, which opens today at Carnegie Institute, is educational in a way which the kindly intentioned donor could scarcely have imagined.

Penelope Redd

It is a convenient synoposis of a movement that had its genesis in a mode of life remote from the Pittsburgh scene, but conversely received its chief official recognition in this alien town. We refer to the first prize awards that have been conferred upon Derain, Matisse and Picasso, at Carnegie International exhibitions.

Looking at the work of Derain, Matisse and Picasso, with provincial eyes, detached from the abracadabra of a metropolitan art dealer's world, one reflects that after all, these men are reminiscent of certain Parisian predecessors.

Derain seems a more sentimental version of Manet Picasso, a more solemn Lucien Simon. Matisse but a more piquant practitioner of that elegant palette which faithfully served Le Sidaner.

Many of the paintings suggest the by and large achievement consequent upon nervous stimulation such as alcohol may procure.

The Chester Dale group has shown that America has two contemporary painters, Eugene Speicher and Henry Lee McFee, who have achieved powerful originality.

24 OTHERS HELD ON DRY LAW CHARGES

Action of U. S. Grand Jury Follows One of Largest Seizures Ever Made Here

The federal grand jury handed down an indictment charging nine men with conspiring to violate the national prohibition law by operation of a huge alcohol manufacturing plant on Vickroy street, near Magee street, which was raided October 6, 1930, by prohibition agents. The plant, in a three-story warehouse, was one of the largest bootleg alcohol plants ever seized in the Pittsburgh district.

The defendants named in the bill were H. Goodman, Carl Gutehurst, Joseph Friedman, George Dill, Joseph H. Weber, Louis M. Johanson, Charles Schmid, Thomas Parker and Charles Peters. The latter six men, arrested at the time of the raid, were charged in another indictment with unlawful possession of 8,560 gallons of alcohol, a 4,500-gallon alcohol still and other alleged contraband, including equipment and ingredients for manufacturing alcohol.

At the time of the raid by government agents four policemen were stationed in front of the warehouse. They said they had arrested three persons suspected of operating the plant two days before the government raid and were watching for other suspects. The police suspects were released.

Twenty-four other indictments under the prohibition law named the following as defendants: Nelson McPherson, Julius Deak, Theodore Corry, Walter Markowski, August Vogel, Mrs. Emma Hall, Gust Sweeney, Austin Ferguson, Frank Pope, Tony Jiansonte, Michael J. Cain, Herman J. Kopf, John F. Fullerton, Herman Zimmerman, John Allon, Clark Montgomery, Joseph J. Denace, Walter Moorhead, Pete Kashonas, Felix Monaco, Edward Flaherty, Joseph Tobasco, Roy Sanders, Abraham W. Shapiro, Frank Voller, John Pilszak, Stanley Kusic, John Barsky, George Angus, Roy Gibet, Charles Moske and Charles McCallum.

PLAN FOR CITY TAX ON AUTOS DENOUNCED BY SCHOOLEY

BACKS SHARING OF REVENUE BY STATE

Fears Drive for New Levy Might Balk Proposal for Division of Funds Collected

Taxation of motor vehicles by Pittsburgh and Allegheny County today was denounced by City Treasurer Roy D. Schooley as a likely way to defeat possible returning of a portion of present automobile taxes collected by Pennsylvania to the cities where they are collected.

Schooley's statement was an answer to the plan outlined by City Assessor Thomas McMahon at a meeting of the Pittsburgh Real Estate Board Wednesday.

CITES OHIO SYSTEM

Return of as small an amount as 10 per cent of the license and gasoline taxes collected in Pittsburgh for one year, according to Schooley, would take care of funds appropriated for the spring repaving schedule and would reduce the tax rate at least four-fifths of a mill. Schooley remarked:

"Advocating of further taxation, to my mind, is the easiest way in the world to prevent any efforts towards getting the state to return us some of the money it collects here. It isn't practical."

At least 15 states have fallen in line in returning gas and license taxes to the various cities and towns where they have been collected. The money is used for street and municipal improvements, Schooley said, adding:

"In our neighboring state of Ohio 50 per cent of the taxes on license fees and 30 per cent of the gas tax are returned. If we take those figures and do a little mathematics we can see how we would benefit by a similar plan in Pennsylvania.

"The public is tired of taxation. What it wants is tax reductions. Taxation of motor vehicles by the municipality and the county would be an unwarranted and an added burden."

SUMMER COURT TERMS RUN 5 DAYS WEEK

Common Pleas to Be Open 3 Days and Criminal 2 Days, Judge Announces

Judge James H. Gray, who will preside in Criminal Court during July and August, announced today that the Allegheny county courts would be open every weekday except Saturday during the summer, an innovation.

Common Pleas Court will be open Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Criminal Court will be open Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Criminal Court will hold an extra day's session under this arrangement. Common Pleas Court will be open three days a week, as customarily, but with court days changed from Tuesdays, Wednesdays and Fridays. Judge Gray said:

"This arrangement will enable court business to be transacted five days a week—or two days more than last year. Routine business of either court can be heard every weekday except Saturday."

District Attorney Andrew T. Park yesterday announced plans for summer sessions in Criminal Court. Tuesdays will be arraignment day and Thursdays plea day.

By these arrangements the judges will get only one month's vacation. June is a month for hearing arguments for new trials and other matters and it rarely happens that the judges are able to clear their desks much before August. After the judges sit to hear arguments each jurist must write opinions and this requires several weeks' work in chambers.

Pittsburgh Firm Begins 2 Lock Jobs

The Independent Bridge Company of Pittsburgh yesterday began work on a $650,000 contract for the placing of lock gates and metal work in two locks on the Illinois River. The Pittsburgh company's bid was one of two submitted to the Chicago office of the United States Engineers.

AT OUR EXPENSE

Ivanhoe was first made many years ago by a mother for her family's fussy palates—and health! Today this same recipe is used—the same care is taken in the making. No wonder Ivanhoe is so rich—so creamy—so enthusiastically accepted!

To introduce this richer, creamier Ivanhoe to local women we make this get acquainted offer now. Order an 8 oz. jar at 20c and you are given a 3¼ oz. jar (usual value 10c). An introductory offer to acquaint you with what thousands of women say is the finest mayonnaise they ever tasted!

Open your small Ivanhoe jar first, and after you have tried the contents, if you are not entirely satisfied, return the 8 oz. jar and get your 20c back!

We do this because we know—and we take this way to let you know—that Ivanhoe is the richest, creamiest mayonnaise of them all. It has the flavor, deliciousness and purity of the home made kind, without the tiresome home work.

Extra Safe—because it's SEALED

The LOUDSPEAKER

By LOUIS REID

NEW YORK, May 7.—No matter how dull a musical program may be there is always an army ready to storm the studio gates to hear as well as hear it broadcast.

There are no more avid fans of the American amusement realm than those who attend the broadcasts of radio programs. In silent adoration they fall before their household gods, some daring to whisper, to laugh, to drop a pin.

Armed with studio passes, they occupy uncomfortable chairs for a half hour or an hour, eager, ecstatic in the presence of a radio pilot shot. The broadcast over, they push to the big shot to shake hands, to get an autograph, to simmer their delight.

The frontier days of the republic ought to be a more fruitful field than they are with the broadcasters, especially those who are trying to raise the excitement of microphone drama. The radio chiefs are also slow in bringing to the air what was known in the early George M. Cohan era as men-about-town. Save for the amiable gossiper, Ray Perkins, there is no one at present on the loudspeakers, who seems to be the type. Did prohibition utter them for good to the speakeasies and sidewalk cafes of Europe?

There are still an innumerable number of hours on the microphones which are ruined at least for these ears—by direct advertising.

Ballyhoo is the spirit of the day. The most flourishing of all American industries. No business depression can stem its force. It scares all of us. The blase, the cynical, the wise may ward it off for a time, but when it is given spectacular expression as in the case of an outstanding sports event they, too, are caught in the rush at the turnstiles or rush to the rocking-chair nearest to the scene of the air waves.

* * *

More listeners will probably hear the Schmeling-Stribling and Sharkey-Carnera fights than have heard any broadcasts on the air since Notre Dame nosed out a victory over the Army at Soldiers' Field, Chicago. Such is the power of propaganda. Such also is the power of dramatic conflict.

The colleges of the land, like the railroads, do not appear to be over anxious to add the microphone to their activities. Strange about the railroads. One would think they would seize an opportunity to paint vacation pictures to the parlors.

Recently we stated that the Great Northern is the only railroad sponsoring a broadcast. We should have been more explicit. It is the only American railroad. In Canada, however, the railroads are in radio down to their last throttle. The Canadian National operates its own stations across the Dominion, and the Canadian Pacific uses the microphone regularly to call attention to its service.

* * *

Comes a call for old-time songs. Thus writes Joseph A. Banks, 111 William street, New York:

"It is amusing to a real 'old-timer' to listen to songs that now pass for old-time songs, songs 20 years old and not the best ones at that, songs that marked the beginning of the era of drool.

"If any advertiser wishes to make a hit on his broadcast let him hire a double quartet of mixed voices and give the old Harrigan and Hart songs, the songs in Hoyt's farces and contemporary songs that appeared in the other shows. Let the broadcasting companies find out that there were kings before Victor Herbert."

* * *

The fortune-telling racket, inspired by the economic market crash, is more audible than ever on the radio. Tea leaf interpreters, phrenologists, star-gazers, numerologists—all are active on the microphones, busy with optimistic messages to the parlors.

CHILDREN SHOULD EAT VARIETY OF FOODS DAILY

Rarely does a single food contain all the elements of nutrition that a child needs. Therefore the diet should be as varied as possible.

A good way to educate children to eat different foods is to ask them to eat a very small portion, or "just a taste." In carrying out such a program be sure that the food is tasty. For example, the taste-appeal of most vegetables is improved by adding a dash of sugar to a pinch of salt. Try this in cooking tomatoes, carrots, spinach, string beans, peas, soup and meat and vegetable stews. Flavor and season with sugar. The Sugar Institute.

The first commercial study of Pittsburgh is about to be made

YOU CAN HELP US GET THE FACTS

THE PUBLISHERS of the Pittsburgh City Directory for the past seventy-five years will make this survey while compiling the seventy-sixth Annual Directory.

In these fast-changing times, it is important that a true and complete record be made—of living habits, of needs and of preferences.

Much of the past history of the world is shrouded in mystery because there was no machinery for gathering the facts. Today we do know a little more about ourselves and other peoples. But not enough! So now, because the complete fact-finding machinery is at last available, this great work is about to be expanded.

How do the people of Pittsburgh live? How do living conditions compare with those of other cities? What conveniences do our people possess? Into what classifications do their varied interests fall? What are the things that make the people of Pittsburgh different? What are the City's peculiarities as a market?

These are questions which heretofore no one has been able to answer with any degree of accuracy. When this survey is finished, they can be answered and there will be available the most complete record of this city's living habits that has ever been compiled. The same important study is being made nation-wide.

We hope that we will have your full co-operation in this great undertaking. See the City Directory man when he calls. Your name and address should be in the Directory. This listing is entirely free and you are entitled to it as a resident of this city. None of the additional information requested will be printed in the Directory.

Every Pittsburgh home will be visited. The Directory man wears an identifying badge in his coat lapel. He is courteous and quick—and will ask for only a few moments of your time.

Barbara Maurel (isn't she cunning?) folds her hands like a prima donna when she sings . . . hear her on WJAS at 8:15 . . . Hits by Jerome Kern, including "My Bill," which we consider a greater dramatic number than "Ol' Man River," are booked for KDKA's audience at 9:30 . . . And Rudy Valee has a guest artist who plays more instruments than there are musicians in Rudy's orchestra . . . the delightful, effervescent Eddie Peabody, banjoist extraordinary (WCAE at 8).

STUDIO LIGHTS

Hellmut Hellmut, the German "McNamee," had an escort of 16 NBC pages when he sailed for home this morning . . . as the vessel steamed from New York harbor, Hellmut bade America goodby with his portable short wave transmitter.

Asked to name the most popular radio artist, a McKees Rocks pupil replied: "Donna Clara." And speaking of Donna, there's a song right down Ben's Alley. . . .

When Walter Edge, Ambassador to France, and the French Prime Minister speak from Paris on May 20, Mary Lewis, vacationing there, is to sing "The Star Spangled Banner" on the same program.

One of our announcers makes Daylight Saving Time a bank slogan . . . he adds an "s" to Saving every time . . .

That reminds us . . . the night before daylight saving time went into effect, Mrs. Ford Miller turned the family clock ahead one hour . . . the WCAE announcer, arriving home later, chanced to think of Papa Garland's idea and advanced the clock another hour . . . Ford came to work an hour early two days in a row at WCAE before discovering the mistake.

Airplanes in solid formation 20 miles long are scheduled to "bomb" New York on Friday night at 11 o'clock, May 22, and Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock, May 23, in the most stupendous stunt broadcast ever attempted by N. B. C. . . . 672 planes, 797 officers and 687 enlisted men are to take part . . . Young Skeetz Miller has arranged 40 private microphone lines over greater New York, but he won't see the show himself until it becomes a newsreel . . . he must stay behind the scenes and direct the pickups . . . Both KDKA and WCAE are to carry the spectacle . . .

QUESTION A DAY:

Is it true that studios of the Columbia Broadcasting System are without windows?—V. S., Springdale.

Answer—While all Pittsburgh studios have windows there are many stations that steer clear of them. Only one studio at Columbia—No. 8—has windows.

* * *

"Sisters of the Skillet" are to be heard three times a week starting July 7 . . . and Pete Dixon's "Raising Junior" is scheduled tentatively for KDKA starting July 3. . . . Raymond Knight plays the baby in this sketch.

PATRICIA PITT'S SPRIGHTLY COMMENT ON SOCIETY

Cast to Be Feted at Supper

A few days ago I was chatting about the group of players of the Stage and Play Society who will give a special performance of "Charm" this evening in the Twentieth Century Club for the benefit of the Eye and Ear Hospital.

Today I want to add that after the play is over, the members of the board of managers of the hospital will entertain with a supper in the clubhouse for the players.

In the cast are Mrs. James M. Graham, Jr., Mrs. Thomas McC. Mabon, La Salle Dorrance, John C. Sheriff, Mrs. J. L. McKay Yardley, Miss Eloise Campbell, Howard G. Wilbert, Joseph S. Kuntz, Jr., Chester Wallace, James Macfarland, Fielder Clark, Priscilla Barnes and Linford Keating.

Mrs. Albert Rieck, of Gladstone road, and Mrs. James E. Graham, of Kinsman road, are giving a large buffet luncheon on Monday, in the Pittsburgh Field Club. There will be about 200 guests attending the affair.

Before I chat about any number of things such as travel news and golf openings, I want to tell you who will be in Janet Davis' bridal party. A few weeks ago I mentioned that Janet, daughter of Mrs. Charles Wiley Davis, of Sewickley and Santa Barbara, Cal., would marry Francis Graham Hollister, son of the Harold A. Hollisters, of Santa Barbara, on Saturday.

Bridal Party

The ceremony will take place at 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon in the Davis' California home, with the Rev. Dr. Charles B. Deuel, rector of Trinity Episcopal Church, Santa Barbara, as officiant.

Amelia Davis will be her sister's maid of honor, and Rosamound Fitch, of Sewickley, will be bridesmaid. Rosemary Davis, small cousin of the bride, will be flower girl. Serving as best man will be John Deuel, of Santa Barbara, and as ushers two brothers of the bridegroom-to-be, Harold A. Hollister, Jr., and Stanley Hollister.

A small reception for members of the two families and intimate friends will follow on the terrace of the Davis home. Later in the evening Amelia Davis will entertain for the bridal party with a dinner-dance in the Biltmore Hotel, Santa Barbara.

Among the guests at the wedding will be the Frederick C. Ewarts, Hester Harton Brown and Walter Faber Grange, Sewickleyites who are in the West.

SILHOUETTE RETAINS ITS POPULARITY FOR EVENING

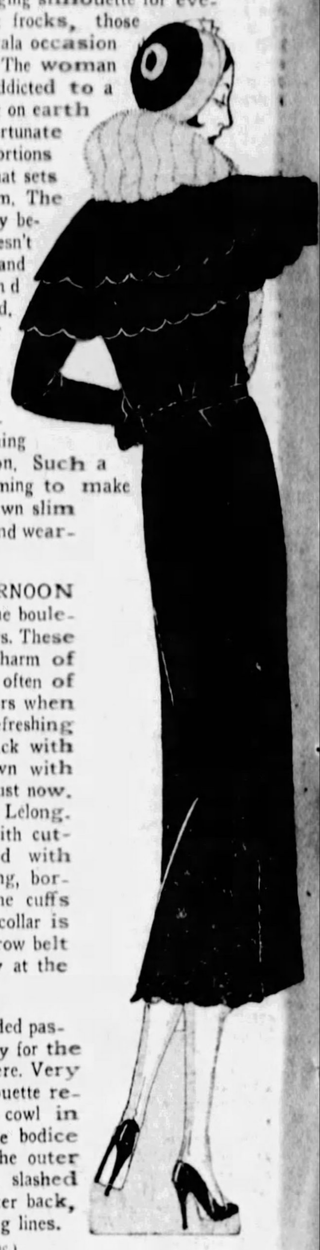
Paris Bureau, Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.



PARIS, May 7.—We seem prone to be clinging vines so far as certain aspects of the mode are concerned. For one thing, we are clinging to the clinging silhouette for evening wear for our really important frocks, those frocks that must be in tune with a gala occasion and yet not be too opulent. The woman with a slim figure is much addicted to a frock on these lines, for what on earth is the use of being the fortunate possessor of such slim proportions unless one wears a dress that sets them off or accentuates them. The wide, full skirt is especially beloved of youth, which doesn't realize how fortunate it is and takes slender forms and other blessings for granted.

But to get back to our frocks. Chiffons in pastel shades and white are much liked for slim, clinging frocks that blend the right amount of sophistication and simplicity — something that is most important this season. Such a frock doesn't need much trimming to make it smart, it has wtihin its own slim confines the essence of chic and wearability.

* * *

DELIGHTFUL AFTERNOON coats are sauntering along the boulevards these lovely spring days. These coats express so well the charm of spring, although they are so often of dark colors. But these colors when worn with white are most refreshing and so blue and white, black with white and, of course, brown with white are well represented just now. Sketched is a new model by Lelong. It is of navy blue crepe with cut-edged scallops strengthened with several rows of fine stitching, bordering the double capes, the cuffs and skirt edge. The shawl collar is set in and buttons tightly at the side front.

* * *

CREPE ROMAIN in a faded pastel pink shade is used by Jenny for the very delectable frock shown here. Very cleverly is the slim, close silhouette relieved by the addition of a cowl in back. This is attached to the bodice and top of the skirt along the outer edges. The irregular flounce, slashed over an underskirt at the center back, also tends to soften the clinging lines.

FIVE AND TEN

By FANNIE HURST

sions, romance, oneness of purpose, sympathy, companionship, love—well, well, what proportion of human beings can hope to sustain those?

Rarick had once hoped. But the young clerk who had come to St. Louis from Keokuk and had married, rather considerably above his station, a Miss Jenny Avery, had cast off many a dead skin since then.

Where was that somewhat caustic, but intellectual-faced girl of those eager, wooing days, who had sat opposite him in a canoe that cut through the Meramac River with the same lean swiftness of their dreams?

Where was that eager, narrow, intelligent-faced Jenny? Why, he had almost lost sight of her the first year of their marriage, when there had been so little time for the old talks of those days when the mind of each to the other had seemed an oyster shell crammed with pearls!

Started With Her Money

Their marriage had routinized so quickly. Perhaps because of the circumstance that it had been Jenny's total capital of $2,500 which had embarked him on the enterprise of the Nick Nack Store on Olive street.

After that, her face had immediately taken on some of the pinch and strain from which it was never to recover. Jenny's money had started him. Had that had something to do with the immediate reversal of what had been their pre-nuptial relationship of idealization of life and love? Undoubtedly.

As a matter of fact, it had been a maneuver of desperation rather than of logic. No more than Jenny had he even remotely anticipated the enormity of that move.

And now . . . perhaps he had been the one to change. The desire for passionate love with the Jenny Avery who had dreamed with him of walking trips through the Pyrenees, was by now nothing more than a sense of frustration lying back in the dim reaches of his mind.

Presently the gilt stars, among the foliated stars, the festoons and the adumbrated cherubs on the ceiling would begin to fade; and dawn, a pale horse, would ride through the Corinthian archway that inclosed the exclusive residential Westmoreland Place, where the Ricks occupied the most pretentious house of all the pretentious row.

It was about this time that John Rarick was due to drop off into brief but resuscitative sleep.

It was about this same time that Jenny, an early waker against her will, was due to open her eyes almost with a click, as it were, and start to a sitting posture at once, as if she had been called. Called she had been, by the pressure of the procession of her thoughts, which were marching so closely beneath the surface of her sleep.

Mind Like Memorandum

Ficke house! Cretonne covers for the sedan. Box for the San Carlo Opera. Mermord and Jaccard's about the twenty-ninth pearl for Jennifer's necklace. Wednesday Club. Wire Long Island Kennels to ship Russian wolfhound to pose in the portrait Shandig was doing. Pour tea at St. Louis Water-Colorists Exhibit. Toy electric motor-boat for Avery. Meeting advisory board Garrison Avenue Home for Wayward Girls. Bridge-tea St. Louis Club. Garden Swing. Sit for Shandig.

Oh yes! Mermord and Jaccard's, too, about the gold bouillon-spoons. They could also be used for grapefruit. Avery must be forced, if necessary, to attend dancing-school. Avery's riding-lesson. Rarick must telegraph bid on the Ficke house.

All this on the instant of awakening. Jenny's mind might have been a memorandum-book, the leaves turning.

. . Oh yes, and remind Rarick to indicate which plants in the conservatory were to be sent to the Chrysanthemum Show, and then, the Ficke house, FICKE HOUSE.

How he slept! Across the mound of the sheets that sprayed lace and sometimes made him flick as if at a fly, she too had to raise herself on an elbow, in order to find his face, which slept in the position of staring upright through closed eyes.

A little man. In the beginning, his shortness of statue had been merely something to regret and then adjust oneself to, with the immemorial processes of a woman compromising between the Lothario of her dreams and the stocky reality of her husband.

Dislikes His Physique

Subsequently, she had come almost to hate him for that shortness. A stunted man. Curious, that to her he had always given the effect of a hunchback. Not so much because his head, on a short neck, was so deeply set into the valley of high shoulders, but because, even in the days when he had wooed and fascinated her, the little hardware clerk from Keokuk, who had first been brought to see Jenny by a poor relation who boarded in the same house with him, had somehow had the face of a hunchback.

A bony, up-thrust, hurt face. Short sinews of rear neck, rather than the slightest indication of an actual hunch, kept it thrust upward. Rarick's face was always cocked to a world slightly taller than he. It was already upturned to his 14-year-old daughter, Jennifer. Fervently Jenny found herself hoping, as her son's slight frame and threat of short stature began to prove worrisome, that some day it would be necessary for Rarick to look up to his son.

All this talk that men of brief stature had ruled the world—poppycock! What about Alexander the Great, Charlemagne, Bismarck, Lincoln? Jenny was not sure about the heroic proportions of most of them. Lincoln, of course, and Alexander, the vast-minded Macedonian, and Charlemagne, must surely have matched up to the heroic proportions of their names. On the other hand, Rarick, Jenny felt certain, had steeped himself in the sugared legend of the magnificence of the small.

How much of this man's success was due to an initial stroke of luck, her patrimony, and her distaste for his petty role of selling wire nails over Schwebbe's hardware counter? Little as it seemed to matter, this speculation was one of tireless interest to Jenny.

Had No Foresight

How much foresight had Rarick ever manifested in his business moves? Precious little. Credited already in the industrial world with vision, acumen and imagination, was it not rather that every move he had made had been a lucky gesture in the dark? The result of an imminent need to jump this way or that; and Rarick had happened to jump right.

How well she could recall the move that had precipitated the change in the policy of the Nick Nack Store to the 5-and-10-cent idea. It had been nothing more nor less than a clutch at a straw to avoid going under. Mingling even with her sense of pride, as she had sat beside him one day at a Chamber of Commerce luncheon and heard him referred to by a speaker as "that far-sighted industrial peer right in our very own midst—John Rarick (applause)," had been her merciless appraisal of him. Without the incalculable boon of her patrimony . . . where would he be?

It had all just happened. Of this much she felt powerfully certain. Rarick had not foreseen his magnificent business maneuvers. They were born out of circumstances and stress. She did not want the world to know what she knew, but she wanted Rarick to know that she knew!

TELL IT TO SALLY

By SALLY MARTIN

How Much Should Wife Do To Keep Home Going?

Should she support the home, keep it . . . , and trudge to work half frozen, while the big boy lolls at his ease . . . or spends his money on himself when he can't dodge a job?

Does the question make you snort? Well, believe it or not, that's exactly what Constance is doing. And plainly, she has no idea of kicking over any traces . . .

Because she says herself that she has repeatedly told her Loafing Romeo "she'll do anything in her power" to keep their marriage from breaking up—even to going out and scrubbing floors!

"Dear Miss Sally:

"I never dreamed I'd be writing to you, but since I can't get any answer from my husband about the way things are going with us, I am writing my life's story to you.

Won't Help Her

"We have been married five years, and I have worked all of that time except for one short lay-off. We had a beautiful church wedding that my folks gave us, and I went to work next day to pay for the wedding pictures, etc., and his money was to be used for the home. But when he was employed he never gave me any money . . . or even put any in the bank and when I asked him what he did with it, he just wouldn't answer.

"During our marriage he has bought me just six dresses. And now I am cold in the mornings going to work, because I haven't enough clothes to wear. My salary goes to pay debts and installments on the things he just must buy whether he has money or not. I am willing to do all this, and I'm not criticizing him for not working. I know jobs are scarce, but if he would only give me a word of encouragement or praise—or have dinner started or the bed made when I come home at night! But he never even has the table cleaned off, although he sits home all day.

Swears at Her

"I am so tired! Not in flesh, but in spirit. And when I cry, he swears at me, and tells me to keep on till I'm through and then I'll feel better. He seems to think that what I am here for is to work and support the home.

"And I have been faithful. I have told him I will do all in my power to not break up our home. I'll go out to scrub floors if necessary. But what does he say to all this? Nothing!

"Will you please give me your opinion of both of us? I have asked him what to do to make our home more happy, but he won't tell me. What do you think is to blame for it all?

"CONSTANCE."

So you're perfectly willing to go on being the world's record Door Mat, are you, sister . . . and all you need is a little encouragement? Well, it may surprise you . . . but you're not going to get it from me!

What do I think of that husband of yours? I think he's pure poison, lady. But so are you! You think you're being "faithful" because you let him lie around like a big housedog while you freeze, work your fingers to the bone and pay his bills. But you're mistaken! What you're doing is making him more of a loafer than he is naturally . . . . . furthermore, I suspect that secretly you're getting a big bang out of wearing the pants for the family and wallowing in big gobs of self-pity.

Must Use Spunk

You say you "will do anything in your power" to keep your marriage from being broken up. Well, if being a martyr for the rest of your life is your idea of a Big Time—go to it! It's not my funeral.

How'll you "make your marriage happier?" Well, the chances are that, after your bad beginning, you can't. But you can try. You can dynamite your husband into making a man of himself—or jar him loose from his Soft Snap. You can tell him to brace up, act his age and do his part—or get out. And you can see that he does it! So get busy, sister! Put a little snap in your backbone. Quit flopping around like a wet dish rag, asking him to tramp on you.

It isn't up to him to protect your rights. It's up to you.

The Lucky Ones

Drawn by Nell Brinkley

This is John and Jane—ONE John and Jane, we are happy to state, out of a grand army of Johns and Janes, old and young, who are stay-at-homes as far as vacationing in Reno is concerned. Jane and John gaze upon the papers together, simple souls, and she turns adoring luminary eyes upon John, and he smiles and squeezes her a mite closer, and they thank the gods of the hearth-fires that they are not as the Westward-trekking ones whose portraits look out at them re—"resting in Reno," "vacationing in the healthful and beautiful (that's right) State of Nevada," "roaming to Reno," "one of the divorce-devotees gracing the colony at Reno"—and so-on and on.

Once, across the wide prairie of the middle of our country wended the wagon-trains of the pioneers, throwing away an old life for a new—and better fortune. Taking a big dare from the wilderness, with the game all full of Indians, vanished water, cloudbursts, blizzards and everything else that the dealer could think of.

Now, besides the blithe vacationists who flit back and forth by train and plane and car, the Sante Fe trail has another band in unbroken file, a flying column that is throwing away old life for new—and hoping for better fortune. Taking a big dare from the wilderness of the Divorce Domain—with the game pretty hard to beat viewed with a happy Jane's wide eyes.

"Poor pretty, and poor plain, all-alone colonists decking the rails of the hotel verandas out there. They look a harassed, nervous, at-loose-ends, dissatisfied, melancholy, laughing-to-keep-up-their-courage, pessimistic, heavily hilarious crew to just plain me! And I'm glad—glad that I am not, and never will be, one of them!" says Jane.

"They ARE just what they look, my dear. The unluckies. And we are, I reckon—the luckies," says John. "But WE tried hard along about the bumps that came with that famous first year and the fifth. And some of those perching on the verandas of Reno didn't try—not HALF. Part of the luck of the lucky ones like us is the hanging on, the holding hands over the rough going until you're in the clear."

—NELL BRINKLEY.

CORRECT MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Reading During Meals

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A friend and I had an argument concerning reading while dining in a public place.

The restaurant in which I have my dinner is not busy between 6 and 7 o'clock when I dine there. I have this hour to fill in between business hours, and the time when I am due at evening school. I have always read during this hour because it helps me spend the time in an educational and interesting manner.

My friend believes that this is a serious breach of etiquette. She claims that never, at any time, should a well-mannered person read during meals. She believes that I am being rude and insulting to both the management and the patrons of the place.

I claim that since there is no one at my table, and the books I read are not large and unwieldy, as a newspaper would be, I am not offending anyone.

Will you please settle this dispute for us?

E. F.

Your friend is being unnecessarily fussy about this. Under the circumstances it is quite all right for you to read, of course, and this certainly takes away from the boredom of eating alone.

Greeting the Employer

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

An elderly employer visits his concern every year and upon arriving greets each employe at his or her desk. Is it proper for a young woman employe to rise when greeting and shaking hands? It seems rather clumsy not to do so but I should like to have your answer as to the proper thing to do in this case.

CONSTANT READER.

I agree with you that it would seem clumsy for the young woman not to rise on this occasion. She would rise, but would not necessarily shake hands, or offer to shake hands, unless this is the known custom of the elderly employer.

Send the Wedding Gift

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Is it proper for a hostess to present a bride-to-be with a gift at her announcement party? Should this be done immediately after the announcement has been made? The gift is meant for a wedding gift.

MRS. G. C.

Since this gift is to be a wedding gift, it should be sent to the home of the bride-to-be, not given at a party of this kind.

Veritzen Comes to Party Bearing Gifts for Madge

Phillip Vertizen's remark concerning the mistletoe was banal and commonplace enough to have been made by Sam Ticer in a facetious mood. But in his voice there was fatuous note which made me look around involuntarily to see if Dicky were within hearing and I said to myself grimly that Lillian's facetious prophecy was coming true.

I ignored the remark completely and gave him a conventional welcoming smile.

"How do you do?" Then I added a perfunctory inquiry about the weather.

"I haven't been outdoofs today," I said, and regretted the statement as his quick rejoinder came.

"Oh, but that is a crime on this glorious winter day. I have never seen a finer one. Can you not come for a short drive now? Surely these young people can carry on without you for an hour!"

"Impossible," I said sharply. "I cannot leave until everything is finished and cleared away."

He opened his lips to protest, closed them again as Otto, who evidently had followed him in from the car, appeared in the doorway, a florist's box under one arm and bearing in his hands as if it were a very new baby an exquisite silver and glass container with magnificent roses of holly red, the roses arranged in it with such striking effect that I knew the master of stage and decorative detail must himself have overseen their placing.

Mr. Veritzen turned and, taking the beautiful thing from Otto, held it up for my inspection.

"This isn't your Christmas present," he said, stressing the first word. "It's just a wish for a merry Christmas which I couldn't resist bringing you today. If you'll tell me where you'd like it placed I'll put it there. It's too heavy for you. Otto open the box."

"I shall set it here for the present." I said, placing it upon one of the low built-in bookcases, which lined two sides of the living-room. "It is so lovely that I shall have to spend some time deciding just where it will look best. Oh, how beautiful!"

The exclamation was involuntary brought out by the magnificent holly red roses displayed in the box Otto had opened. Rarely have I seen such blossoms, not fully opened, but which would be in perfect bloom upon the morrow. It was an immense box and there were roses enough in it, judiciously arranged with green to make a bower of my living-room.

As it was to be a children's Christmas, I had not planned much expenditure for flowers, realizing how large were our other bills. I had ordered a few modest red roses for the dining room mantelpiece and some holly red carnations for the living room. But now I could visualize Mr. Veritzen's roses in living room and dining room, and the carnations in halls and library, and I felt a gratified little thrill as I anticipated the loveliness of the flowers against the Christmas greens.

But my pleasure was distinctly threaded with apprehension as to Dicky's reaction to this third tribute of flowers to me. I had managed to keep him surprisingly good-natured through the orchid centerpiece of Mr. Veritzen's dinner at The Sign of the Scimitar and the lavishness of the flowers he had provided for Mary's party. But there had been signs that his patience was wearing threadbare and I dreaded the moment when his eyes should light upon these flowers.

In the back of my mind also there was apprehension about the emphasis Mr. Veritzen had placed upon the first word when he said: "This isn't your Christmas present." Was it possible that he meant to send me something else, something with his usual lavishness which would arouse Dicky's jealous anger?

With an effort I pulled myself together and warmly thanked Mr. Veritzen for the flowers. But I think he sensed the disturbance in my mind—he is wonderfully keen—and he took a rather hasty leave, so much to my relief that my voice was unwontedly cordial as I said in parting:

"Don't forget that we expect you tomorrow."

He turned his eyes full upon me, and in their depths I saw the beginning of a flame.

"Do you think I could forget that?" he asked softly as he turned away. And I went back to the hanging of the greens with the feeling that my Christmas festivities were going to be complicated by the presence among the trimmings of high explosives.

THE BEAUTY BOX

By HELEN FOLLETT

Modern life is so delirious with wise-cracks, jazz, gasoline buggy rides, loud speakers and noise of traffic that the pretty girl with poise, ease of manner and quiet conversation shines out like a silver star. Reserve is a lovely quality; if a girl has it she is a good listener and will give her best feller a chance to tell what a swell-elegant boy he is. Men are usually afraid of the smart gal. They can't keep up with her and they are cast into the background. Smart dollies often do a lot of play acting. They needn't think that everyone isn't wise to 'em.

Be color-wise. When selecting a frock, drape the fabric about the throat and shoulders. Note the effect of the color upon the complexion. It is the complexion that matters most, then the eyes, lastly the hair. Whatever makes the skin appear loveller, to better advantage, enhances the beauty of the eyes by a process of reflection. Only the young and the beautiful should wear black. Navy blue is the good old standby. So is French blue, which can be worn by brunettes, blondes and the betwixt-and-betweens. The redheads can get away with green.

HOUSEHOLD HINTS

To prolong the life of your kitchen linoleum, make certain that the boards are smoothly laid before placing the covering. If care isn't given to this point and the foundation is not even and secure, the linoleum will wear out in the irregular spots much more rapidly.

Even though you do not care for the appearance of a centipede when you meet one in the cellar, let it wend its way in peace. It feeds on other household pests and really does no harm to household articles.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

The Kidneys Need Care in Illness and Health

All of us are familiar with the fact that the kidneys are essential to life. But few of us actually appreciate the intricate mechanism involved in the daily working of these parts of the anatomy.

Dr. Copeland

The kidneys are two glandular organs located in the upper part of the abdominal cavity, one on the right side and the other on the left side of the body. They take from the blood waste materials and excess water. Three to four pints of water are removed daily. The quantity varies, depending upon the amount of water taken into the body.

The waste materials removed are in the form of uric acid, lime, salts and other chemical combinations. These waste materials are essentially the end products of certain foods, particularly of the meat and other proteins we have eaten.

It follows that a diet rich in such foods increases the amount of work that the kidneys must do. In individuals with diseased kidneys, the diet must be low in protein and free as possible of all salts.

The body has three main avenues for the removal of waste products. They are the kidneys, the intestinal tract and the skin. When the labor of the kidneys is to be decreased, it is necessary to put as much work as possible upon the skin and intestinal tract.

By means of the sweat pores located in the skin, the body is able to throw off the same waste products as are found in the excretions of the kidney. Hygienic care of the skin and daily bathing aid in maintaining this additional channel of waste removal.

Proper elimination further lessens the work of the kidneys. This can only be accomplished by avoiding any tendency towards constipation.

In health as in disease, the kidneys should be treated with great respect. I am firmly convinced that we have too many irritating substances in our diet. Salts, peppers, spices, condiments and highly seasoned foods, so commonly used in every American home, are likely to irritate the kidneys and prepare the way for kidney disease.

In addition to temperance in the taking of irritating substances, I advise that you drink more water. Six to eight glasses of water should be taken daily. Where there is definite infection of the kidneys, this amount should be increased to at least a glass of water every hour.

If you drink sufficient water you will flush out the kidneys and prevent irritation. In addition, abundant water aids the skin and intestines in their work of relieving the burden of the kidneys.

Fifth Loss to Grimes.
Yanks Break Old Jinx.
O'Connor Not Eligible.
Classy Sprint Field.

GELBERT MAKING GOOD STREET'S DOPE

BEFORE YESTERDAY'S GAME at Forbes Field, Gabby Street, the Cardinal chieftain, expressed the belief that Shortstop Charley Gelbert would one day be the best player in baseball. After noting the part that Gelbert played in the 13-inning defeat of the Pirates, the only point on which local fans disagreed with Street in his appraisal was the fact that he had put it in the future tense. This former Pittsburgher, whose father played end on the D. C. & A. C. all-star professional football team here more than three decades ago, is without a superior right now if measured by the exhibition he gave in the opening game of the present series.

Charley Gelbert

If there was anything that Gelbert overlooked in repeatedly snatching the game away from the Bucs and winning it for his own club, the spectators failed to notice it. As a destructive force on both the offense and defense he was just about the last word, and though the St. Louis team as a whole played great ball in bagging the contest, it was Gelbert's work in the main that made the triumph possible.

TWO HITS AND a run were Gelbert's contribution to the Cardinal attack. His three-bagger to open the thirteenth really was the knockout blow, as it put him in a position to score the winning run a moment later on Martin's single. His nine assists included several glittering stops and throws that choked off Corsair rallies, and as the final play of the game he ran over past second base to scoop up Comorosky's roller and throw him out at first while what would have been the tying run was coming in from third with the winning tally right behind it.

There is always a difference of opinion on the most-valuable player ranking in the National League. Jewel Ens says he'll take Lloyd Waner for his. Rogers Hornsby gives the award to Woody English. Burleigh Grimes believes there's nobody in the class of Travis Jackson, and Bill Terry also comes in for quite a few votes. But if Gelbert continues steadily in the stride he showed yesterday he'll speedily convince a whole lot of juries that Street has the right dope.

THOUGH HE TOOK himself out of the game when he found his arm tiring after Mosolf had opened Pittsburgh's half of the thirteenth inning with a single, Burleigh Grimes received credit for yesterday's St. Louis victory, his fourth straight win of the season without a defeat.

That makes five times in a row that Grimes has beaten the Pirates since the local management let him go, and they have yet to win a decision over him, though he was forced to retire three times in eight starts. In three straight games prior to yesterday's number—two last fall and one this spring—Burleigh gave the Rovers a total of only three runs.

THE CARDS SET a season's record for the major leagues by winning yesterday, as it was their sixth consecutive victory. The White Sox have been the only other club to win as many as five games in succession. The Redbirds also kept their slate clean in the matter of winning extra-inning contests. They have taken part in three overtime battles already and won them all—10 and 11 innings against the Cubs, and 13 against the Pirates.*

Al Simmons

AL SIMMONS didn't get off among the batting leaders this season, but that he is about ready to get going under full steam was indicated by his big afternoon against the Red Sox pitchers yesterday when he spanked out five hits in as many times at bat, with two doubles included.

Simmons is the fourth major league player to make five hits in a game this season. Joe Vosmik did it in the American League against the White Sox, and Walter Roettger and Hughey Critz did it in the National against the Cards and Braves, respectively. Vosmik made the best record for total bases, as his five swats included three doubles and a triple.

SPEAKING OF BASEBALL miracles, the fact that the Yankees have defeated the Senators twice in succession ought not to be overlooked. It is so seldom that the Yanks beat Washington in even one game that when such a thing happens New York baseball historians probably record it in red ink.

No club in either of the big leagues has been such a jinx to another outfit as the Senators have been to the Yanks. Even counting the two victories they scored Tuesday and yesterday, the New Yorkers since 1929 have registered only seven wins and one tie against Washington, while losing to the Johnsons 21 times.

NOW THEY'RE PUBLISHING a story to the effect that in joining the Yale football coaching staff for next fall and deciding to take the medical course at New Haven, Paul (Bucky) O'Connor passed up a chance to play another season at Notre Dame and possibly make the all-America team. Though O'Connor will be graduated next month, it is pointed out that he played only two years on the varsity and could play another year by taking a post-graduate course. Nothing of the sort. Notre Dame observes Big Ten Conference rules, though not a member, and under those rules post-graduates are not permitted to participate in varsity sports. Bert Metzger, star guard, also played only two years, yet he would not be eligible to play for Notre Dame next fall if he were to remain in college after his June graduation.*

STARTER PETE BOWEN will have a frisky field to handle in the 100-yard dash at the twenty-fourth annual Pitt interscholastic track and field championships in the Stadium next Saturday. The field will be large and classy—as classy as it was last year, when O'Dile Pryor, of Ford City; Bill Bohlender, of Grove City, and Milligan, of Peabody, were engaging in their season-long century-dash fight.

Milligan and Bohlender are out of competition this year, but Pryor is back. That the last named is going to have a tough season was evidenced last week, when he was defeated in the first big century of the tri-state interscholastic campaign. Dooms, of Uniontown, beat him in the Geneva relays, the two Negro sprinters finishing only inches apart in the final heat.

LAST YEAR, BOHLENDER, Pryor and Milligan raced four times. They first met in the Carnegie Tech games. The following week they were at Geneva; the week after that at Pitt, and thn they clashed for the fourth time in the W. P. I. A. L. carnival at the Stadium.

Pete Bowen

Pryor scored two victories, notably one in the W. P. I. A. L. race, which attracted a lot of attention and practically decided the sprint championship of the year.

IN THAT RACE, Bohlender, who had run a 9.9 hundred a week earlier, was the favorite, with Milligan second choice and Pryor third. It was figured that a poor start would beat Pryor, but as things turned out, Pryor was away like a flash and beat Milligan by a stride, Milligan in turn finishing ahead of Bohlender. This week, besides having Dooms to beat, Pryor must compete against runners of the caliber of McBurney and Anderson, of Washington; Burgwyn, of Steubenville; Wertz, of East Palestine; Greenberg, of New Castle, and Binstock, no slouch as a Bowen surely will have an all-star field to

LID-LIFTERS ATTRACT THRONGS

A new opening day attendance record for the Middle Atlantic League was established today as clubs making up Elmer Daily's circuit inaugurated the 1931 campaign with games at Huntington, Hagerstown, Scottdale, Jeannette, Charleroi and Fairmont. New contenders for the championship, defended by Johnstown, new pilots at certain helms and an abundance of new playing talent were the magnets which drew the fans in record numbers.

Charleston, Huntington, Beckley and Hagerstown are the new members of the loop which got their first taste of Mid-Atlantic competition today. Financial difficulties encountered by other minor circuits caused these teams to look to the Daily circuit for shelter from the financial storm, and the Mid-Atlantic loop, which no doubt owes much of its rugged health to its progressive experimentation, agreed to give the "orphans" a home and increase the membership to 12 clubs for the first time in the circuit's history.

Cumberland and Scottdale are the only "oldtimers" who tested the "newcomers" today. The Colts appeared at Hagerstown, and Beckley was the guest of Scottdale. Two new league members were opposed at Huntington, Charleston appearing there, and the remainder of the program found Johnstown at Jeannette, Wheeling at Charleroi and Clarksburg at Fairmont.

10 PLAYER MANAGERS

Most prominent of the new managers is Leo Mackey, Pittsburgh basketball and football official, who has had some experience in pennant winning. Leo piloted Chambersburg to a championship in the Blue Ridge League last season, and he hopes to lead Cumberland to a flag in the 1931 campaign.

Ten of the 12 clubs are piloted by player managers. Only Hooker Joe Phillips, at Jeannette, and William Phillips, at Charleroi, are to direct their clubs from the bench.

Although lineup changes are general throughout the circuit, Charleroi and Jeannette introduced the most new talent. Bud Lewis, former first baseman who has been transferred to third base, is the Jays' only holdover, and Fred Divinney, second baseman, and Lew Phillips, middle fielder, are the only members of the 1930 Charleroi squad who have been able to retain their places on the team.

DAILY OPTIMISTIC

President Daily, of Ebensburg, appeared optimistic in a statement issued today that the "league can put the 12-club schedule over." He added it was the first league in 20 years "to have the nerve to start out with a 12-club circuit."

Daily also said he felt that the split season, which will be in vogue again this year, "will help a lot in keeping things alive and moving with interest high."

The first half season ends July 9 this year, and the second half September 7, Labor Day.

CARD PROTEST DISALLOWED

NEW YORK, May 7.—(AP.)—President John Heydler, of the National League, today announced he had disallowed the protest filed by the St. Louis Cardinals on the game the Chicago Cubs won at Chicago April 19.

The score of the game was 4 to 1. The Cardinals had asked that it be replayed.

The protest was based on the decision of Umpire Charles Moran, who had ruled Riggs Stephenson, Chicago outfielder, had held a ball "momentarily," retiring a St. Louis batter. St. Louis claimed that ball should have been declared a double.

President Heydler held that the decision was one involving solely the accuracy of the umpire's judgment and that the game shall stand as played.

STREET DISAPPOINTED

Manager Charles (Gabby) Street, of the Cardinals, here today expressed disappointment over President Heydler's ruling on the disputed decision in the Chicago game.

"We do not want anything that is not coming ot us," Street said, "but we think the contest should be resumed at the point where the argument occurred. The ball was not caught, we are satisfied. If the contest were resumed with one out in the eighth and runners on third and first, we feel we would have been given just what was coming to us."

Fight Results

At Montreal—Art Giroux defeated Willie Davies, 10 rounds.
At Chicago—Edgar Norman and Buck Easterling drew, 10 rounds; Tony Saunders and Frank Sorell drew, 8 rounds.

CLEVELAND SET FOR TITLE GO

CLEVELAND, May 7.—(INS.)—Chicago may think it still has a chance to land the Schmeling-Stribling fight, but it definitely is coming to Cleveland, according to a statement here today by George H. Bender, manager of the new Cleveland Municipal Stadium, where the match is scheduled to be held July 3.

"It is true," said Bender, "that a final contract has not been signed between the city and the Madison Square Garden Corporation of Illinois, but sufficient commitments have been made to make it certain that the bout will be held here."

CHICAGO HOPEFUL

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., May 7.—(Universal.)—The bill permitting 15-round boxing bouts in Illinois has been approved by a vote of 92 to 10 in the House.

If the measure passes the Senate, to which it now goes, Chicago may land the Schmeling-Stribling world's heavyweight championship match to be staged this summer, the House was told by Representative Frank E. Foster, (Rep.), of Harvey, who sponsored the legislation for the American Legion.

PIRATES LOSE LONG FRACAS TO LEADERS

By CHARLES J. DOYLE

Still dazed over their defeat of yesterday, the Pirates this morning were attempting to organize themselves to meet the second drive by the Cardinals, than whom there is no better team in baseball. Larry French will do the twirling for the Buccos and Jess Haines will grace Fogarty Knoll for the league leaders.

The initial appearance of the Redbirds in Pittsburgh was marked by a battle which would have been eulogized by countless thousands had it been a part of a World Series spectacle or even a struggle with pennant significance. The Pirates lost the titanic tussle in 13 innings, 6 to 5, and any chronicle of the game from a Pittsburgh standpoint has to be filled with the tears of regret.

GRIMES STRONG

The Freebooters, with Heinie Meine up, swapped punches with Burleigh Grimes in such a tense manner the Wisconsin Wildcat, with the victory in his grasp in the thirteenth round, collapsed to such an extent he had to turn the sharpshooting job over to a fresher man. The veteran of the moist fling still is able to meet an ordeal that would floor many a 20-year-old youth, but when the boyish Jim Mosolf lambasted a mad single to right in the last half of the thirteenth, Grimes walked to the shower room of his own volition. His stuff was gone and he had enough consideration for the remainder of his teammates to run up the white flag.

Mosolf represented the tying run and he was on first base with none out and the top of the batting order up. Had Grimes been a die-hard pitcher he probably would have stayed to pitch to the Waners and George Grantham and there might have been a different story to tell. Big Jim Lindsey came to the middle of the picture and after Jim made Paul Waner look worse than Paul ever looked at the plate in Pittsburgh, the relief hurler saw the victory clinched when Charley Gelbert turned in a championship play on Comorosky with the bases loaded and two out.

BREAKS AGAINST MEINE

Heine Meine saw enough bad breaks in one contest to do him until the Fourth of July. In several big spots after the nine hard rounds had been finished the Dutchman all but felt the throb of victory surging within him, his joy being stifled by some brilliant

GRANTHAM TIES SCORE IN TWELFTH

The initial appearance of the National League Champion St. Louis Cardinals in Pittsburgh yesterday resulted in a thrilling 13-inning victory over the Pirates, 6-5. Martin, center fielder of the visitors,

SKIBOS REPEAT NET TRIUMPH OVER DUKES

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Two happenings of importance enlivened local tennis circles yesterday to mark gathering force of progress of the 1931 campaign. Event No. 1 featured Coach B. P. Hoover's Carnegie Tech varsity net outfit, which entertained the Dukes of Grant Siverd on the Skibo rectangles and thumped the Red and Blue racqueters by a 7-2 count.

Event No. 2 concerned none other than the redoubtable Ben Pope, squash racquets mentor at the Keystone A. C. here since the downtown clubhouse opening. Ben, 'tis understood on the authority of a Sewickley citizen who should know, has been signed to handle the tennis reins at the Edgeworth Club this summer. The Ohio Valley organization, rejoicing in the possession of a new establishment to replace the old structure burned to the ground a couple of years ago, soon will come into its own with four lately laid out courts and aims to go in for tennis in a large and serious way.

CAPABLE COACH

Pope, whose experience as a net professional includes several summers at one of the most active Long Island country clubs, is a fine player and a most capable instructor. His acquisition by Edgeworth should prove of exceptional value, not only to his employers, but to the game in Western Pennsylvania, as well. Addition of the Keystone ace boosts the total of the Steel City tennis pro colony to four, others being the noted Jules Boise, of the Allegheny Country Club; Harold Mortlock, of the Pittsburgh Athletic Association, and Warren Krueger, of the Pittsburgh Golf Club.

Tomorrow on the Hill, Dr. Billy McEllroy's Pitt court delegation will engage the Red and Blue squad in a joust that will mark formal inauguration of athletic relations between Panthers and Dukes. On Saturday, all three Pittsburgh institutions will see racquet action, Pitt and Carnegie being at home to Wash-Jeff and Geneva, respectively, while Duquesne invades the fastnesses of Greene County for a brush with Waynesburg. The summary of the Tech-Dukes match:

SINGLES

Smeaton, Duquesne, defeated Dueger, Carnegie, 6-2, 3-6, 6-3; Groves, Carnegie, defeated Casey, Duquesne, 6-3, 6-2; Morris, Carnegie, defeated Campbell, Duquesne, 6-3, 7-5; McCloskey, Carnegie, defeated Bullion, Duquesne, 6-4, 6-3; Berghane, Carnegie, defeated Boland, Duquesne, 6-4, 6-1; Gesling, Carnegie, defeated O'Neill, Duquesne, 6-2, 7-5.

DOUBLES

Smeaton and Boland, Duquesne, defeated Dueger and Berghane, Carnegie, 6-2, 9-7; McCloskey and Fergus, Carnegie, defeated Campbell and Casey, Duquesne, 6-1, 6-2; Groves and Gesling, Carnegie, defeated Bullion and O'Neill, Duquesne, 6-2, 8-2.

In a match played on the Duquesne courts, the Carnegie Plebe squad blanked the Duke Yearlings by a 7 to 0 score. Last week the Plebes won, 7 to 1.

M.-A. Clubs Split With House of David

CLARKSBURG, W. Va., May 7.—(AP.)—The House of David baseball team, assisting Middle Atlantic clubs to get into condition for the opening of the season, broke even yesterday in games at Fairmont and here.

In the afternoon, the Michigan team lost to the Fairmont Black Diamonds, 1 to 0. In a night game here the Clarksburg Generals dropped a game to the visitors, 5 to 3.

MACALUSO VICTOR

NEW YORK, May 7.—(AP.)—Leonard Macaluso, all-America fullback from Colgate, came back to New York last night to show his wares as a professional wrestler and threw Al Thomas, of Salem, Mass., in six minutes 21 seconds of wrestling in a bout at the 69th Regiment Armory.

OCTANE RATING . .

BLUE SUNOCO rates

72

Automotive engineers agree that gasoline over 70 octane rating is essential for modern high compression motors. Premium priced fuels substantiate this fact by having an average octane rating of 73 7/10 (U. S. Bureau of Mines Report, March, 1931).

BLUE SUNOCO (by the same method of testing) . . . . 72+

This premium rating of BLUE SUNOCO which in and around this city has advisedly been held at 72+ proves it is a high powered, knockless, quality motor fuel . . . yet it sells at regular gas price. You save at least 3c per gallon.

OCTANE

The knockless quality of any gasoline can be duplicated by mixing various proportions of octane and heptane.

"Octane rating" represents the percentage of octane required in the mixture of octane and heptane to duplicate the knockless quality of the gasoline being tested.

Therefore, the higher the octane rating of a gasoline, the better is its knockless performance.

HEPTANE—A similar substance but of lower anti-knock quality than any gasoline.

INTERNATIONAL TEAM MATCH ARRANGED

NEW YORK, May 7.—(AP.)—Arrangements for an official series of women's international golf team matches between the United States and Great Britain have been completed, H. H. Ramsay, president of the U. S. Golf Association, announced today. The first competition, for a trophy to be known as the Curtis Cup, will be held in Great Britain in 1932.

Inauguration of the new series for women golfers of the two countries, along the lines of the now famous Walker Cup competition for men, follows negotiations that have been carried on for some time between representatives of the women's committee of the U. S. G. A. and the Ladies' Golf Union of Great Britain.

Details remain to be worked out, Ramsay said, but the probability is the Curtis Cup matches will be played every two years, alternately in the United States and Great Britain, as is the case now with the Walker Cup competition.

The Curtis Cup is the gift of the Misses Margaret and Harriet Curtis, of Boston. Each of the donors formerly held the United States women's championship, Harriet Curtis in 1906 and her sister in 1907.

GARDEN CARDS FINAL SHOW FOR MONDAY

That Motor Square Garden final boxing show of the indoor season, next Monday night, which was off late yesterday, is back on again this morning, all because of the fact that Matchmaker Jules Beck suddenly hit upon an arrangement that would enable him to get together a card in a hurry.

The Garden has to be "set up" for another wrestling show next Wednesday night, and, while they were about it, they thought they might as well put on the boxers two nights before and let the layout stand for the grunters.

As a result, Beck announces he will have six six-round bouts, with Dominick Petrone, formerly of New York and now of Mt. Washington, meeting Babe Ruth, of Louisville, Ky., in the main bout, and Tiger Joe West, of Pittsburgh, opposing Jack Tracy, hard-hitting Negro, of the North Side, in the semi-final.

Vito Mazzeo, of Cleveland, and Jimmy Thomas, Negro bantamweight, of the Hill, meet in a return engagement in the fourth tussle. Mazzeo grabbed an unpopular decision over Jimmy in Cleveland recently. Billy Holt, Negro, of Homewood, boxes Jimmy Moinette, welterweight, of Alliance, O., in the third bout, with Jackie Wilson, Negro, of the Hill, paired with Babe Peleco, former Philadelphian, who now is making Pittsburgh his home, in the second spot. Lloyd Clements, of Swissvale, and Chuck Semack, of Clairton, mix in the opening number.

It will be a popular-priced show, with tickets selling at $1 and $2.

SPORT SHORTS

NEW CASTLE.—(AP.)—Authorities of the Pennsylvania Railroad here have announced that Frank Jerry, Jr., a telegrapher, will represent the company in the long-distance run of the annual track and field meet of the American Athletic Union, at Baltimore, on May 16. Jerry has been in competition for 20 years.

CLEVELAND.—Rumors that the Indians planned to trade First Baseman Ed Morgan and Outfielder Doc Porter to the Browns for Shortstop Ralph Kress, have been denied by Billy Evans, general manager of the Cleveland club.

CUMBERLAND, Md.—Six releases on the eve of the opening game has enabled the Cumberland Colts, managed by Leo Mackey, of Pittsburgh, to get down to the player limit of 20.

BALTIMORE.—(AP.)—A warning has been sounded by Mortimer M. Mahoney, manager of the pari-mutuel department at the Pimlico race track, of the operation here of a group of swindlers who are altering losers' tickets and selling them as winners. The game, he said, is to offer for sale, away from the track at night, a ticket on one of the day's races for $20 on which the purchaser is told he can collect a much larger sum, the swindler explaining he has been called out of town and will not be able to go to the track the next day and cash the ticket himself.

ST. LOUIS.—(AP.)—The Browns have adopted the Sunday doubleheader plan, inaugurated last season by the Cardinals, in an effort to lure more customers through the turnstiles. Phil Ball, owner of the Browns, announced today a double bill for next Sunday with the Athletics. Monday's game will be moved up as part of the twin attraction, leaving Monday an open date.

Says Nick Altrock

(Baseball's Comedian)

Nick Altrock

NEW YORK, May 7.—Those Cardinals have certainly picked up right where they left off last year. Before this season started all the experts picked the Cards to repeat, and those guys evidently believe all they read in the papers. And maybe Burleigh Grimes hasn't helped some. Spit may be a horrid word on the end of a cigar, but it does a sweet job on the top of Burleigh's fingers when he is flinging that old ball. I understand St. Louis is so heated up the folks now go out to the ball park regular to see the Cards, but the Browns are considering moving to Reno and suing the fans for desertion.

play. Once it was a great assist by Pepper Martin, a Cardinal understudy, who looks better than half the outfielders in the National League. On another occasion Sunny Jim Bottomley made a diving catch as the winning run streaked plateward, and then there was the force play on Eddie Phillips at second base in the twelfth round. Manager Ens and Phillips both aver Phillips was at the bag in time for the safe decision.

These were just a few of the high spots, the intimate details of which would require more space than any newspaper can afford to give. Even the unfortunate umpires had to enter into the plots as villains. For the second time this season an official was struck with a ball, where if there had been no stoppage of the sphere in this regrettable manner, the Pittsburgh cause would be enhanced.

MARTIN STARS

There should not be any censure of the capable Reardon for his part in the mixup for Capt. Traynor crossed up everybody within the ball orchard when he caused the throw that started the mixup. The hassocks were loaded with Buccos and only one was out when the Polish Flyer nicked Burleigh for a ripping line hit to left-center. The drive looked like a cleanup smash, but the speedy Martin, who later ruined the Pirates for the afternoon, flagged Commy's drive and held it to a single.

Grantham and P. Waner scooted over the plate on the drive and Traynor wheeled to third as Marin flipped the ball to Frisch. Traynor apparently thought the ball was still in the pasture and he rushed past Skipper Ens' red light in a ruthless manner.

Catcher Jimmy Wilson, one of the best in the sport, was so sure that Pie had stopped at third, he had his back toward Frisch. Jim was engaged in adjusting his mask again when the desperate Frisch decided to throw to the plate. Frank had a perfectly good play to make, but nobody at the plate to help him, aside from Beans, who had no so such desire. Well, Frisch just had to throw that ball homeward and he let fly with his best fast ball as Jim faced the other way.

The ball struck Reardon and rolled a few feet away. Wilson eventually saw the harmless sphere rolling around near the plate and as Traynor fished over he knew something important was happening so he grabbed up the rocket and held Comorosky at second. The inning ended without further runmaking.

UMPIRES OFF STRIDE

The decision on Phillips at second brought the "stagger" system of officiating into bold relief. It is not the intention here to state the umpires are not efficient, but the plan that send them to different spots on the diamond every day is one that riles many folks.

But that isn't the half of it. Ben Sankey, a late arrival in the game, was nipped at the plate with the winning run in the eleventh. Erv Brame batted for Bill Regan in the eighth and drove in the tying run. Sankey went to the keystone sack. Ben led off in the eleventh with a single and he moved along on a sacrifice.

At this point the stranger in centerfield threw the Pirates for a serious loss. Tommy Thevenow whacked a pretty single to center. It was good baseball for Manager Ens to wave Sankey home, but it also is good baseball when a smart outfielder plays close up for a short hitter. Martin was on Thevenow's drive like a hawk and he threw Sankey out by 10 feet or more.

TARTAN STARS DENY RIVALS FIRST PLACE

By JESS CARVER

Another record entry is doomed—pardon, it should be scheduled—to compete in a high school track and field carnival this week. Last week, the Geneva interscholastics, a comparatively new meet, being only three years of age, set a new high with 1,100 individuals and 65 schools. This Saturday, some 90 individuals from 61 schools will vie for honors in the section's oldest carnival, the twenty-fourth annual renewal of the University of Pittsburgh's interscholastic championships.

For two consecutive years, New Castle High has presented a well-balanced squad in the Pitt carnival and walked off with top honors. On each occasion, the Lawrence Countains came apparently from nowhere to win other schools being red-hot favorites prior to the start of competition. The showing made by the Castleites in finishing second in the Geneva meet last week might indicate that they'll be up in there again this year, despite the presence of powerful squads from West Virginia and Ohio, to say nothing of teams from other sections of this state.

RECORDS SAFE

Being almost a quarter of a century old, the Pitt meet doesn't figure to have as many records toppled as the Geneva meet did last week, when 10 were shattered and two equaled. There will be two or three bettered Saturday, that is certain, but not very many more.

Last year, only two fell, Joe Stern, of Steubenville, now of Kiski, set a record of 50 seconds flat in the 440 and Curt Young, of Beaver Falls, a mark of 46 feet 2¼ inches in the shot. Young will be back this year.

The meet will get under way about 10 o'clock in the morning and will hardly be over before 6 in the evening which lends credence to the report that what the governor of North Carolina said to the governor of South Carolina really was:

"It's too short a time between track meets."

TARTANS TRIUMPH

Carnegie Tech's trackers had a setup with Wash-Jeff yesterday in their dual meet at Washington. The best the Presidents could do was gain a tie for first place in the broad jump, which is a funny event to tie in, and were soundly trounced, 104 to 30.

George Nease, winning both the 100 and 200, and Tom Coulter, annexing the two hurdle races, were double victors. Nease covered the 100 in 10.2 and the 220 in 22.8, not a bad afternoon's work for Carnegie Porgy.

PHARMACISTS WIN

The Dukes ran off their intramural meet on the Bluff campus yesterday. The Pharmacy School students finished up out in front with 52 points, leading the School of Accounts by seven. The College of Arts was a poor third with 12 and the School of Education fourth with nine. The Scientists brought up the rear with five.

No times were taken and no hurdle races were run. Bud Devinney, the footballer, took two firsts, winning the 220-yard run and the broad jump, and finished second in the pole vault.

The Tipoff

West Virginia Wesleyan and West Virginia open a two-day baseball series in Morgantown today. Geneva's tennis team meets Westminster at New Wilmington in another district collegiate encounter.

The boys are shooting telegrams of congratulation to Bob Higgins, head football coach at Penn State, today. Bob and Mrs. Higgins announced the birth of a son in the St. Mary's Hospital, Clarksburg, W. Va., yesterday.

Two of the district's educational institutions supporting baseball teams turned in triumphs yesterday. Kiski's nine, with Jim Marks coaching at third base, presumably, defeated the Greensburg Generals, 4 to 3, and St. Vincent's College nine walloped the Latrobe Cardinals, 15 to 5.

Matmen Suspended For Poor Work Here

PHILADELPHIA, May 7.—(AP.)—The State Athletic Commission has announced the indefinite suspension of the following boxers and wrestlers:

Jim Clinkstock, Memphis, Tenn.; Wladek Zbyszko, Brooklyn, N. Y., and Tony Felice, all wrestlers, for unsatisfactory services at Pittsburgh; Jack DeMave, boxer, Weehawken, N. J., for unsatisfactory services at Johnstown, Pa.; Joseph T. Ferraro (Joe Firpo), boxer, Palo Alto, Pa., for participating as an amateur in an amateur contest; Gaby Bagdad and Ray Miller, New York, and Leo Dazzo, East Elmhurst, Long Island, all boxers, for failure to honor contracts in Philadelphia.

BOWLERS IN MATCH

CHARLEROI, Pa., May 7.—Two star bowling teams, representing Homewood and Charleroi, will meet in a special match here tonight. Ed Renkey, who rolled 700 in the singles of the Alley Owners' tourney in Pittsburgh recently, will captain the Homewood team.

Sport Vignettes

When United States Senator James J. Davis tomorrow presents the William Randolph Hearst rifle competition shield and medals to the members of the Carnegie Tech team which finished third in the Eastern Unit in this year's shooting, the occasion will mark a high spot in the history of the interesting event . . . The competition has just passed its tenth anniversary and this year's meet saw it attract a total of 505 teams, setting a record . . . Back in 1922, the first year, the competition was confined to high schools having R. O. T. C. units and 42 teams competed . . . Seventy-one teams participated the second year, and the event proved so successful that colleges, universities and military schools asked to be permitted to compete . . . With the consent of the War Department, which had sponsored the shoot from the beginning, this change was made, and it has been in effect ever since, with a gradually increasing enrollment of teams from all over the United States, Hawaii and Porto Rico.

The idea behind the shoot at the time of its inception was to train boys along preparedness lines for the future by giving them "something to shoot at." . . . The competition is a part of the War Department official record and has won high praise in both military and educational quarters, Mr. Hearst having been highly complimented for his sponsorship of the plan . . . Last October, on Chicago Day, 5,000 students of Chicago high schools turned out in a body to honor Mr. Hearst as the city's guest for the day, and, as part of the ceremonies in Soldier Field, cadet officers presented him a beautifully engraved memorial which read: "To Mr. William Randolph Hearst in recognition of his encouragement to the Reserve Officers' Training Corps, we, the cadet officers of the Chicago public high schools, wish to express our appreciation of his unfailing support of the R. O. T. C., and for his generosity in making possible the national R. O. T. C. rifle competition." . . . Carnegie Tech, which will be honored tomorrow by having such a distinguished personage as Senator Davis present its trophies, has competed for the last six years and always has finished well up among the leaders.

The epidemic of no-hit games in local high school circles indicates one of three things. . . That the kid curvers are exceptionally good, the batters are below par, or there is a lot of loose official scoring going on . . . So many no-hitters in such a short time is rubbing it on a bit thick . . . Cuddy DeMarco, former local boxer, postcards from New York that he has just returned from Havana, Cuba, where he substituted out of the crowd at a fight one night and knocked out one Jose Piquro in the second round . . . Maybe the answer to the high position of the Cardinals in the race again this year is the fact that they have only one southpaw pitcher left on the club, Bill Hallahan . . . A lot of clubs have been handicapped by lefthanders of one sort or another . . . It seems Cleveland is afraid it won't lose the Schmeling-Stribling bout back to Chicago.

The tip is out that Strangler

Three games in the City League and two in the West Penn head this evening's sandlot card. Fans in the district should see some interesting battles in both loops.

In the City circuit Homewood will cross bats with the North Side Civics at the Salt Works grounds. There is every reason to feel that both teams will be in a fighting mood after dropping their initial games.

At Bloomfield, the Dormont team will meet the J. L. Thomas aggregation. Dormont, after being held to a tie game by the North Side Buicks last evening, with Carrol on the mound, probably will meet lots of trouble from Pat O'Shea and his mates.

BUICKS MEET SHOEMEN

The third game finds the North Side Buicks clashing with Book Shoe at Olympia Park. Johnny Dunsky and his players certainly have had a tough schedule this week, meeting Homewood, Dormont and Book Shoe on successive nights, but have yet to be defeated.

In the West Penn League, Manager Jack Fertig will pry off the lid at West Park, Homestead, with the Linwood team providing the opposition. The Aces, one of the most popular teams in the district, have a big following and Linwood should give the crowd some thrills.

At Homewood playgrounds, Manager George Miller and his Reliance Life nine will usher in the season with Swissvale Community. Manager Ed Walsh is not the least bit worried regarding that opening defeat, and he has three pitchers primed to throw them at the Insurance nine. With Homewood absent, Reliance should play to big crowds at Homewood.

CONLEY TO HURL

Manager Fertig has announced that Conley will pitch against Linwood, while Manager Pasquelli will work Jimmy Arrigo. This boy is a comer.

In the Steel City loop, Snee Dairy travels to Hays Borough to meet the Caruso club. Plenty of real action will be on tap at Monongahela when the Keenie Garage nine hooks up with Joe Montana's New Eagle Indians. This is the big local fight and should attract a banner crowd. In the same loop, Riverview goes to Floreffe.

DORMONT, BUICKS TIE

Dormont and the North Side Buicks battled to a 2-2 tie in their City League feature tussle at Dormont last evening. A fine crowd witnessed the tussle. Dormont tallied in the final inning to gain a tie. Carroll limited the Buicks to six hits, while Wojanis gave up only five.

In the Greater Pittsburgh League, Edgewood defeated the Murs, 8 to 2; North Bessemer nosed out Whitaker, 6 to 4, and Iroquois defeated the Wally Smith nine, 8 to 5.

The Twenty-eighth Ward Traders defeated Curry, 6 to 5, and the Colliers walloped the Rhyne Club, 15 to 0, in Central Pittsburgh League frays. In the North-South League, the Union Printers defeated the Pathfinders, 10 to 3, and St. Georges downed the Telegraph Club, 7 to 5. In a Steel City League game, the East End Cardinals and the D. J. Brodericks played a 2-2 tie.

The Homestead Grays featured the tussling in independent ranks by crushing Swissvale, 22 to 5. The Grays slugged out a total of 28 hits, 12 of which were doubles. Wilson, Gray third sacker, had six hits, three of them doubles.

Pitcher Fest, of the Homewood Cardinals, turned in a no-run, no-hit performance in blanking the Oliver Cubs, 6 to 0. The Oakmont-Verona nine defeated Turtle Creek, 8 to 3, and the Cyclones won over the Black Hawks, 8 to 5. The Pate A. C. defeated the Wheeler Tigers, 9 to 6.

PRIMO ANSWERS GARDEN PLEA

NEW YORK, May 7—(AP.)—Primo Carnera, giant Italian heavyweight, and his managers, William Duffy and Leon See, have filed affidavits in Federal Court in answer to the plea of the Madison Square Garden Corporation of Illinois for an injunction restraining the Italian from boxing Jack Sharkey at Ebbets Field, Brooklyn, June 10. Hearing on the injunction is scheduled for tomorrow morning in Federal Court here.

Carnera, in his reply to the claim that he had been signed by the Garden January 13, 1931, for a September match with the winner of the Max Schmeling-Young Stribling bout in Cleveland, July 3, set up nine defenses. See, in his affidavit, quoted federal statutes which declared prize fighting illegal under penalty of five years' imprisonment, and asked to be excused from the agreement on this and other grounds.

Lewis "mayhemed" his way out of his recently regained (for the fourth time) world heavyweight wrestling title when he was disqualified for biting his opponent, Henri Deglane, in Montreal, the other night, for a definite purpose, the same being that the only way he can get a bout with Jim Londos, recognized in some quarters as the champion, is to enter the match as a challenger and not as a rival title claimant . . . With all of the claims and counter-claims of world records in duckpin bowling since Ed Renkey rolled his 700 total for three games in the Greater Pittsburgh Alley Owners' Association tournament recently, a reader kicks in with a score that tops 'em all . . . It's a 783 total for three games . . . "This record ought to stand up for 24 hours at least," the reader writes. "It was set in Birdville, Pa., by one of two rollers who tossed off something like 90 games in six hours in one evening recently. As I got it, this fellow rolled a series of 278, 300 and 205—and, if that doesn't total 783 for a new high, I'm your Chinese laundryman."

WOMEN'S GOLF PRO HERE

By VERN SWARTSFAGER

Helen MacDonald, of Chicago, internationally known because she is the first woman golf professional in the world, during her interesting exhibition and talk on "How to Play Golf" at Kaufmann's today, took time out to discuss golf in general. Miss MacDonald is surprised at Bobby Jones' swing, as shown in a diagrammed motion picture; she loves teaching, especially to children, and believes if there were more good women instructors, greater women golfers would result.

"Although I teach both men and women," Miss MacDonald said, "a man cannot properly instruct a woman. And the women have not the proper breaks in equipment; usually they have to be satisfied with clubs handed down from their husbands, when really they ought to have special clubs for themselves."

Miss MacDonald is the first woman in golf to direct the making of special women's models in clubs, and, whereas in the past only one length and weight were available to women, there now are no less than five varieties of each.

TOURNEY CARDED

Two opening competitions are scheduled in golf for today.

Marked by a big luncheon, the women of the Longue Vue Club, near Verona, will set their weekly tournament in motion this afternoon. The luncheon, according to Mrs. Louise McDonald, will be followed by a regular club tournament. A large entry is anticipated.

The opening dinner match, and individual medal play, under seven-eighths handicap, are slated today at the Greensburg Country Club. Gen. Richard Coulter and J. E. Watson are the captains of the respective club teams.

SCHOOL TILTS CARDED

Two Interscholastic Golf Conference matches are on the books for tomorrow. In Section I, Langley plays Taylor Allderdice High, at Pup's Foot, and in Section II, Bellevue meets McKeesport at the Youghiogheny Country Club. The scheduled Shady Side Academy-Hollidaysburg non-league tilt, slated for Saturday, will be played at Hollidaysburg instead of at Shady Side.

CLUB MATCH STAGED

The women of the Alcoma and Valley Heights opened their competitive seasons yesterday with a club match.

Mrs. Robert A. Gardner, the former Miss E. Lucille Bejach, one-time city champion, has quit the amateur ranks and taken up instructing in Walker's nets in the William Penn. Mrs. Gardner is expected to make a splendid instructor, and is the only woman professional in this district.

Jimmy Conrad, a well-known figure in the local sport swim, has signed as caddie-master at the new South County Park course. He'll take over his new job one week from tomorrow.

THIRD ACE-HOLER

H. T. Aufberheide turned to the third hole-in-one of the local season yesterday when he popped his drive into the cup on the 156-yard No. 3 hole at the Pittsburgh Country Club. He was playing in a threesome with Dr. J. P. Griffith and O. C. Hurst at the time.

The executive committee of the Women's Golf Association of Western Pennsylvania has decided upon a seven-lucb group in Section 1, of the women's team league, following the resignation of Chartiers Heights from the fold. This means that one club will be idle each week under the new schedule now being drafted. The first match is to be played at the Pittsburgh Field Club, May 19.

A commercial golf course, the Coraopolis Heights Golf Links, in Beaver road, will be opened June 1, according to M. J. Heinlein, Jr., manager. It is a nine-hole affair, almost 3,000 yards in length.

Senators Obtain Scarritt From Sox

BOSTON, May 7.—(AP.)—Russell Scarritt, Boston Red Sox outfielder, has been released on waivers to the Washington Senators. He will report to Walter Johnson's club at Detroit tomorrow.

The Red Sox management also announced the release of Outfielder John Lucas on option to the Galveston Club of the Texas League and the recall of Pitcher Walter Murphy from the New Haven Eastern Leaguers.

FOCH CONSULTS LEADERS ON TRUCE

Insists Army Men Be Given Voice in Armistice Terms

In yesterday's installment Marshal Foch told of his plans for a vast offensive in Lorraine, that was to be a march to the Rhine toward Berlin. The attacks of the American armies and those of the Allies continued on all fronts early in November, 1918, and the defeat of Germany was in sight. Foch told of the German appeal for peace to President Wilson and outlined his draft of the essential conditions of an Armistice.

By MARSHAL FERDINAND FOCH

CHAPTER XL.

When the Supreme War Council was created in 1917, the heads of the Allied governments had at their disposal as technical advisers their military representatives installed at Versailles. The creation, four months later, of a Commander-in-Chief for the Allied armies had somewhat diminished the importance of these advisors, but theoretically they remained none the less the normal counselors of their governments. It was in their capacity as such that they were called upon, on October 8, to draw up a project for an armistice with Germany.

However, while it was natural that the Allied governments should seek the advice of their military representatives, it was still more appropriate that, first of all, the generals in command of their armies should be consulted.

They knew better than anybody else the state of the troops, the efforts of which they were still capable and the conditions under which they could halt their operations without losing the benefit of the victories gained and be assured of an advantageous situation, in case hostilities were resumed.

Marshal Foch

Their responsibility, therefore, was as much involved in granting an armistice as it was in conducting the fighting, and this I brought out in a letter to the French Prime Minister dated October 16. It read as follows:

"In my letter of October 8, I had the honor of informing you concerning the principal conditions under which, in my opinion, we might consider a cessation of hostilities at that date.

"The first and second conditions named are those imposed by military exigencies; and in his answer of October 14 to the German proposals, President Wilson stated that the matter of fixing the terms of an armistice should be referred to the military counselors of the governments.

"This phrase military counselors, already frequently employed in the course of previous conversations, is ambiguous and demands elucidation. As a matter of fact, the only military counselors qualified to deal with the conditions of an armistice are the commanders-in-chief.

"They alone are responsible to their governments for the safety of their armies and the conditions under which hostilities should be resumed in case of rupture. They alone are thoroughly informed as to the state of their armies and of the enemy forces confronting them.

"In what concerns the French and Belgian theaters, I consider that the marshal commanding-in-chief the Allied armies, after agreement with the commanders-in-chief of the French, British and American armies, and the chief of staff of the Belgian army, should be the governments' counselor.

Presents Questions

"The third condition deals with taking guarantees for obtaining reparation for damage done in Allied countries, which is to be demanded at the time the peace treaty is negotiated.

"This guarantee consists in the occupation of the territory on the left bank of the Rhine, to be evacuated by the troops of the enemy within a specified time and to be occupied and administered by Allied troops in concert with the local authorities until the treaty of peace is signed.

"Will these guarantees suffice for ensuring the reparations to be demanded by France and her allies, especially Belgium?

"If so, after reparations shall have been paid, what is to be the fate of these territories? Are we to continue in occupation? Are we going to annex a part of this territory, or to favor the creation of neutral, autonomous or independent states, forming a buffer?

"Should the armistice make complete reservations at this time as to the fate of these territories?

"These are questions concerning which it is important that the military commander, whose duty it will be to sign the armistice and discuss its terms, when a request for it has been presented, be informed through a study of them made beforehand with the governments concerned.

Careful Study Needed

"For it is certain that the armistice should give us full guarantees for obtaining, in the course of the peace negotiations, the terms that we wish to impose upon the enemy; and it is evident that only the advantages secured to us by the armistice will remain to us; that only the sacrifices of territory agreed to by the enemy at the time of signing the armistice will remain final.

"For these reasons it seems necessary that I be placed in close and continuous touch with a prominent member of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, whose duty it should be to keep me informed as to your views and those of the Allied governments regarding the terms of the armistice.

"If you share this point of view, I request you to inform me with what member of the Ministry of Foreign Affairs I am to collaborate."

What was obviously needed was a careful preliminary examination of the political terms to be put in the armistice, as a guard against being surprised by future events. The armistice involved halting the operations of enormous armies, and it ought to contain within itself the germ of the principal conditions of the definite treaty of peace in such a way that whatever was decided upon later could involve no serious modification of the situation established at the moment hostilities were arrested.

The Prime Minister, however, wishing to preserve the government's freedom of action, in a letter dated October 23, rejected the suggestion that some important official of the Foreign Affairs be placed at my disposal.

Referred to Tribunal

The conditions of the armistice, were, in fact, to be established by the Allied governments. This meant that the preparation of the terms would naturally be conducted by the most active of the governments.

The question had just been placed before them by President Wilson. Cutting short his correspondence with Berlin, he referred the German government to the tribunal composed of the Allies, leaving to the latter, however, full latitude to conclude or not conclude an armistice and to dictate to the enemy conditions such as "would fully protect the interests of the peoples concerned and assure the associated governments unlimited power for the purpose of safeguarding the peace to which the German government has consented and the details to be executed."

The Allied governments had no reason to reject the principle of the Fourteen Points as a basis of peace, except that, if deemed advisable, they might ask that some of them be modified or elucidated. They also had no reason for objecting to a cessation of hostilities, provided the conditions which they intended to impose were accepted by the enemy.

They asked me, therefore, to prepare a detailed proposal from the military standpoint. M. Clemenceau, their spokesman, made an appointment with Gen. Petain and I on October 24 at Paris. We agreed verbally upon the conditions which would assure full security to the Allied armies and the guarantees to be exacted to that end.

With a view to getting their opinion, on the afternoon of the next day I called together at my headquarters at Senlis, the commanders-in-chief of the American, British and French armies; also the chief of staff of the French navy, Vice Admiral de Bon. I requested them, in turn, to state what they thought should be the armistice conditions.

View Expressed

Marshal Haig, speaking first, declared that, in his opinion, the German army as a whole was not so broken that it could not offer serious resistance; that it was capable of retiring to the German frontier and of defending it against equal or even superior forces. On the other hand, the British army was short to the extent of 50,000 infantry, the French army was exhausted, and the American Army incompletely organized. Therefore, he thought that the conditions to be imposed upon Germany should be moderate and demand nothing further than:

2—Evacuation of Alsace-Lorraine, Metz and Strasbourg being delivered to the Allies.

Questioned in his turn, Gen. Petain declared that it must be made impossible for the Germans to resume hostilities. To insure this he proposed:

When asked for his opinion, Gen. Pershing stated that he considered the military situation most favorable for the Allies, and that it justified imposing upon Germany severe conditions. He therefore proposed:

2—Occupation of Alsace-Lorraine by the Allies.

Conditions Outlined

At the close of this meeting to which the commanders-in-chief had thus been summoned for the purpose of giving their views on the subject of the armistice, a draft was made of the military conditions to be submitted to the Allied governments; they were in substance:

2—Surrender by the enemy of 5,000 cannon, 30,000 machine guns and 3,000 minenwerfer.

Question of Refusal

I took this paper myself to Paris on the afternoon of October 26th, and I handed the text to both the President of the Republic and the Prime Minister. During my conversation with M. Poincare, when he remarked that these conditions might be judged inacceptable and refused by the Germans, I replied:

"Then we will continue the war, for at the point the Allied armies have now reached, their victorious march must not be halted until they have surrendered all German resistance impossible and seized guarantees fully ensuring peace—a peace we will have obtained at the price of inestimable sacrifices!"

The prosecution of our march toward Berlin should not be interrupted until we were masters of the obstacle presented by the Rhine, for it bars the road to Berlin along the space between Cologne and Mayence.

On the other hand, in a letter dated October 29 I warned M. Clemenceau against the tendency of some of our Allies to show too great severity in the matter of naval terms they might wish inserted in the armistice.

On the morning of October 31, the heads of the Allied governments held their first meeting. It took place at the Paris residence of Col. House, who had been sent expressly to France by President Wilson. At the opening of the meeting, it was learned that Turkey had just signed the Mudros armistice and that Austria had collapsed.

During more than three months the Germans had been steadily beaten in France and Belgium and forced continuously to retreat. They had lost over 260,000 prisoners and 4,000 guns.

Enemy Disorganized

The military situation of their country was seriously disorganized, whereas we were in a position to keep up the fighting all winter if need be, and along the whole 250-mile front. We could readily go on fighting until the enemy was destroyed if that became necessary.

After I had concluded my statement Col. House asked if I considered it preferable to continue the war against Germany or conclude an armistice with her. I answered:

"I am not waging war for the sake of waging war. If I obtain through the armistice the conditions that we wish to impose upon Germany I am satisfied. Once this object is attained, nobody has the right to shed one drop more of blood."

During the afternoon of the same day (October 31) a plenary session of the Supreme War Council was held at Versailles. At the opening of the meeting, which was to be devoted to examining the terms of the Austro-Hungarian armistice, I was again asked to express my opinion, and I repeated my statements of the morning to the effect that the Allied military situation was becoming more and more favorable.

HOOVER'S TALK VIEWED AS CREATIVE

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, May 7.—Unquestionably, tax cuts would come as the zephyrs of spring to an economic world torn by depression.

Mr. Rukeyser.

From a non-political standpoint, there is creative energy behind President Hoover's proposal before the International Chamber of Commerce that the nations of the world reduce their expenditures for non-productive purposes, such as armament. If the ratios could be maintained on a lower and cheaper level, no nation would impair its position relatively.

From a strictly business standpoint, expenditures for highways, for example, would be far more stimulating to trade than outlays for armament. Road building would not only stimulate immediate employment, but would pave the way for future business in the sale of motor vehicles. Before the depression, the chief barrier to the foreign sale of automobiles was the limited number of good roads.

From a strictly economic standpoint, too, there is another angle to the adroit Hoover message.

COULD DIVERT FUNDS

It is impossible to ear-mark purchasing power, which can be used as the possessor sees fit. Thus Mr. Hoover made it self-evident that under existing conditions any remission of foreign debts to the American treasury would in effect be used to pay for armament intended as a weapon against the United States as well as other countries.

The way for debtors to put their houses in order is obviously to cut down their unnecessary, noneconomic expenditures. Until they have done that, there is likely to be little appeal behind their subtle propaganda in behalf of further debt reduction.

EVENING SUN-TELEGRAPH MARKETS

Stocks Fluctuate — Local Market Active

STOCK MARKET CONTINUES TO FLUCTUATE

Stocks Drop After Early Advance and Stiffen in Afternoon; Chain Stores Up

NEW YORK, May 7.—(AP.)—Equity share prices continued to fluctuate irresolutely today, while a strong demand developed for bonds.

Stocks advanced during the first hour, but turned downward before mid-day, as heaviness cropped out in the motion picture issues and spread to other sections.

The list again stiffened in the afternoon. Wall Street was more interested in the cheapening of money rates which apeared to be forcing bank funds into the bond market and the weekly meeting of the New York Federal Reserve directors this afternoon.

Advances of a point or two were numerous in the early trading, but were canceled or modified later, as several shares showed losses of a point or two, including United States Steel. Chain store issues reached new high levels for 1931.

Call money again renewed at 1½ per cent, but funds were plentifully offered in the outside market at 1 per cent.

The continued unsettlement of the bond market has been regarded in banking circles as a serious deterrent to business recovery. In most periods of business depression a strong bond market has developed as a forerunner to business recovery. It is felt that the fresh declines in money rates may be part of a determined effort on the part of banking leaders to force funds into bonds.

It is believed that numerous construction projects which might provide considerable employment are being held up pending a better bond market. The numerous offerings of short term government securities, reflecting the large U. S. Treasury deficit, have been taking up much of the surplus of funds.

Some bankers believe, however, that it may be unwise to force any continued heavy buying of bonds by banks, on the theory that the banks would have to liquidate part of their bonds to meet commercial requirements when business improves, and that the bond market might be unsettled at an inopportune time. They feel that the cheap money theory has failed; that money is cheap enough, and further cheapening would only make it more difficult for banks to show reasonable earnings.

Blindly, choking from the acrid smoke, Newton and Scorpio emerged from the tunnel, finding themselves in an outhouse behind a tenement. To the east the sky was filled with a red glare. The steak house was in a blaze.

Newton staggered toward the river bank. Scorpio, his shoulder bleeding profusely, fell, arose and started after him. Then he stopped, looked and dashed back toward the tenement. A line of armed men was approaching.

It was Peaches.

"Peaches—they're after me! Hide me! Save me!

The gangster stared about him wildly.

"Call over to 'em! Give 'em a bum steer—tell 'em you saw me goin' toward the other end of town."

Shoots Attorney

"My old pal Slaughterhouse—sure"

"I've got him in here!" she shrilled. "It's Scorpio! Come up and get him! Help! Police!"

"Peaches! Help me! I'll give you a million bucks. I'll give you diamonds! Stop yellin', or I'll break your neck!"

"Crawlin' on your knees to me! Come on, cops, and get him!"

Scorpio dashed to the window, opened it, and jumped.

Ahead the way was now clear to the river. The posse was milling in the tenement.

Now and then he fell heavily. Loss of blood had made him weak.

If he could only get to the old dock behind the stockyards! There was a boat there—

He didn't have any money! He couldn't go back to get it—and without money he was helpless. Where was Newton!

He rose, and doggedly, shoved onward.

Around the rear of the gas plant he crawled. The stockyards fence. Inside the animals were milling, snorting. From the rear came the shouts of pursuing men.

"Go to hell, you rat!" he shouted, as he ran toward the pier.

Scorpio raised himself, and slowly drew his gun. He fired three times. Newton dropped.

Scorpio crawled toward the fallen man and quickly rifled his pockets. Handful by handful, he crammed bills from the lawyer's pockets into his shirt.

The dying Newton opened his eyes.

"Serves me right—it was the first time I ever turned my back to you," he muttered.

Whole Gang Condemned

From 13 barred cells, hysterical, terrified men watched the dark window at the end of the tier.

For it faced the east.

And when it would begin to turn gray, dawn was coming—the dawn that would signal the gallows to start its ghastly work in the green death chamber beyond.

Silent guards watched the 13 men in Condemned Row. Some were praying. Others screaming hysterically to God.

Of all the thirteen about to "go out" he was the only one unconcerned. And he was to go first.

"Shut up!" snapped the Gouger. "And if Scorpio hadn't bumped off Newton he'd have gotten us all out of this!"

"What about that new mouthpiece — where is he?" Eddie called to Scorpio.

Stay Is Refused

Metz gave a shrill scream and pointed. The outer window was beginning to show gray.

"Oh, God—don't let them kill me—don't let them!" he screeched.

"Clang."

The warden and a priest stood behind two guards, who quickly entered the cell. Scorpio felt a heavy belt strapped about his waist. The next instant his hands were seized—forced to his sides, and strapped to the belt.

"And to be hanged by the neck until you shall be dead," he solemnly concluded.

"Die? DIE? Get out of here, you sniveling, psalm-singing rat! I don't want to listen to your bellyaching—"

Scorpio's face had gone flabby. His eyes stared from their darkened sockets. He spoke as if to himself.

Scorpio Pays Penalty

Before them the gallows raised itself—the platform, the crossbeam, the dangling noose, with the great knot that breaks a man's neck when he drops through the trap.

Slowly they mounted the 13 steps. A guard guided Scorpio's feet to the trap, and quickly strapped his legs. Another adjusted the noose, the knot behind the left ear, and over it placed the sinister black cap, slit at the side to accommodate the rope.

The clang of the trap, as it shot back into its iron guides. The "tunk" of a falling body, as it snapped the rope taut. The first of the day's executions was over.

EPILOGUE

Centro was calm in the sunshine of a perfect day. Gone were the garish "honky tonks" that had lined its street. The gaudy signs on Johnny Franks' steakhouse had been painted out. Trees had been replanted.

"Anne, dear," said Carl, "you've got a pair of the most beautiful eyes I've ever seen. . . . do you know something? I'd like to take you around and introduce you to my dear old Aunt Emma."

THE END.

DAILY TRUE STORY — The Parachute Jump

Aviator Consents to Quit Flying for Fiancee

Langford Hastings made his customary three-point landing, which such aviation instructors as happened to be on the field always pointed out to their embryo aviators.

"That's the way to do it," they would say.

This day Langford couldn't stop to chat with Hal Peavey, chief instructor, and his students. He murmured a hasty apology, went and washed up, hopped into his car and started for Milford and the home of Bertha Sargent.

Bertha was sitting on the veranda steps as he came up the pebbled driveway at her father's home.

"Hello, there," Langford called.

"Hello, Lang."

He got out of the car and kissed her.

Then he looked at her and shook his head.

"No so good, eh?"

"Not good at all, Lang."

"Your august sire turns both thumbs down on me?"

"Absolutely. It won't do you a bit of good to see him, and you might lose your temper."

"Got to see him just the same, Bertie. Think I'm going to walk away and leave the sweetest girl in the world for some other chap to win?"

"But, Lang, father says——"

"No, eh? But he might make it affirmative after I used my eloquence on him. I——"

Col. Sargent drove up at this moment. His chauffeur opened the door and he got out. He greeted Langford Hastings politely, but gravely, and with no show of being overjoyed to see him.

"I understand you want to talk with me, Hastings?" the colonel said.

Colonel Objects

Langford followed him into his library.

"Colonel, I want to marry Bertha," Langford said.

"That's one worthy ambition. Any young man who did not want to marry her would be lacking in intellect. A great many young men have expressed that same ambition to me and to Bertha, but—er—"

"And Bertha wants you to consent, sir," Langford hastened to say, as the colonel hesitated.

"She thinks she does. But here's the point—it is a risk for any girl to marry an aviator. To marry one who has no money, who has never saved any money, is a double risk. I would be—any father would be foolish to approve of such a match for his daughter."

"Well, I'm not broke. I have a few thousand tucked away and some property. I'm not intending to keep on flying for long. Just as soon as I get a little more capital I am going to buy half of my uncle's lumber business—it's a profitable outfit."

"How long will that take you?"

The colonel shook his head.

"Afraid I cannot approve, but if you'll show me that you can give up flying and get along, then I'll have no reason for opposing this. Mind you, Hastings, I've no objections to you personally—"

"I couldn't earn half the money in anything else."

"Then we have argued around in a circle and my answer is still 'no.'"

"I'll take a look - see, right away, perhaps I can hit something that will permit me to quit flying. Of course, I can see your side of it. If I didn't know flying any more than you, and if I had a daughter, doubtless I would do as you are doing. At any rate, I'm not ready to give up Bertha."

Letter From Lawyer

The colonel bowed. He was quite sure of himself. He had Bertha's promise not to elope with Hastings.

It wasn't a very cheerful hour that Langford and Bertha had together, after this, although he promised to do his best and she promised to help win her father over.

Langford couldn't very well expect that his uncle would make him a present of half of his valuable lumber business, and he had a lot of money to earn before he could buy it.

There was his property up Granite Valley, a large territory that he had inherited from his grandfather. Unfortunately this wasn't good farming land and the timber had been cut some 15 years before. The new growth wasn't valuable yet and wouldn't be for another 15 years, at least. So all he owned seemed to be many acres of rocky half-grown woodlands and a noisy small river excellent for fishing purposes.

It was weeks later that Langford's lawyer, Peter Turner, who had been his schoolmate in high school years before, wrote to him. Peter had been given such slight legal work to do as Langford could supply, paying his property taxes and making out his tax blanks and the like.

"Bradford Jackson," Peter wrote, "a wealthy man, likes the fishing so well up through your Granite Valley property that he thinks he wants to buy it. At any rate the tax collector, not knowing your address, sent him to me. He will give you twelve thousand if he decides to take it, and offers a thousand for a 60-day option. Looks good to me."

Langford telephoned to his lawyer and told him to close the deal for him.

Langford Depressed

This was finally done. The option was to expire in 60 days. That meant that if, at midnight on August 15th, this man Jackson had not handed over eleven thousand, the property was still Langford's also the $1,000.

Scarcely a week elapsed when Langford, calling on Bertha again, found her very much depressed.

"I'm afraid you haven't much of a business head, young man," the Colonel said, "for it seems you've let go the key piece of property where a power company wants to build its dam and make a reservoir."

"But you could have fifty if you hadn't grabbed the option money."

Langdon was the bluest man on the great aviation field on August 15. His friend, the lawyer, had investigated and learned that all of this about the power company was true, and that Jackson had already agreed to sell them the property.

That morning Peter telephoned long distance from New York to the flying field, and notified Langford that he had a wire from Jackson saying he would be in Peter's office that day to take up the option.

And then Mr. Bradford Jackson was driven to the field himself. Langford saw him.

"He mine, get out the little XG for me," Langford said, eagerly, to the manager, "and call me Mr. Langford."

"Anything to oblige," but the manager was puzzled.

And so Mr. Bradford Jackson was introduced to Langford as "Mr. Langford."

Arrives Too Late

"I have to be in New York by 5 in the afternoon," Jackson explained, "important business deal."

"Get you there by noon—if nothing happens, sir."

"Nothing must happen," Jackson said sharply.

At a little more than ordinary height Langford changed his course. Instead of heading for New York he headed back toward Ohio.

Then he motioned to Jackson and they used the speaking tubes. Langford was greatly excited.

"They gave me a rotten ship this morning—two struts gone now, wing will snap off in 10 minutes—only one parachute, the one you have on—you've got to jump and jump right now. If I can land in a lake I may save my neck. Get set now!"

Jackson, rather pale, was frantic to get out before the wing snapped off. He listened to instructions, stepped off, his 'chute opened properly and he went fluttering down right where Langford wanted him, in an isolated section far from airports or railroads.

No wing snapped off and Langford made New York in good time.

At midnight Mr. Bradford Jackson was just getting aboard a milk train out there. He wired Langford's lawyer that he would be there next day.

He was there, but it was too late then.

"Young man," said Bertha's father, "that was a phony near-accident, I'm sure, but it was clever. Imagine making Jackson flounder around out in a wilderness while his option expired."

Concern About Roads

Administration Plan for Township Highways Causing Protests.

There is deep concern about the effect of Gov. Pinchot's program for the construction of 20,000 miles of rural highways. It is felt in some quarters the administration program may be carried out at the expense of the main traffic roads. Also that it would retard building of main highways for several years.

There are heard complaints, too, because the 20,000-mile rural program calls for macadam construction suitable only for comparatively light traffic. Cement firms and other materials concerns object that this excludes important state industries from participating in the benefits in a commercial way.

It is said to be felt in administration circles that to depart from its plan would necessitate narrowing its scope or so greatly increase the initial expense that the program would require a longer period of years. The comparative cost of macadam is estimated at $8,000 per mile while concrete runs up to $50,000 per mile, it is claimed.

The township road bill, now in the Senate, provides—"and as much of the money in the motor license fund as may be necessary to carry out the provisions of this act is hereby specifically appropriated to the Department of Highways for the purpose of this act."

Alarmed because this seems to indicate possibility of devoting all moneys of this fund to township roads, to the exclusion of other highway improvement, those who desire more general highway construction are proposing that the township bill be amended so that $20,000,000 will be specified for its purpose.

The situation appears to be one for deep consideration. Gov. Pinchot, in promoting township roads, merely is living up to one of his campaign promises—to "pull the farmers out of the mud." He was elected by virtue of these and other promises made to the voters, so it is natural that he should feel that the people who elected him should have first consideration, since they, in effect, established his policy by their votes.

Yet the other side has claims that are not without virtue, and it seems that a way might be found for a compromise. This could be reached.

Civil Service

Bureau of Recreation Jobs Filled, But No Examinations Are Held.

The workings of our civil service law are becoming increasingly interesting. In recent hearings before City Council it was shown that civil service examinations were completely ignored in making many appointments. It was disclosed that no examinations of applicants for summer employment with the Bureau of Recreation were held in sufficient time to provide a list of eligible workers.

Director Edward G. Lang, of the Department of Public Works, filled 20 vacancies last Saturday. He explained that he had asked for a list of eligibles but found there was none.

Secretary Thomas F. Hansberry, of the Civil Service Commission, announced that examinations will be held in June. But the applicants who pass the coming examination cannot be appointed this year. All the jobs are filled.

This charming system shows a higher degree of finesse than the practice of completely ignoring examination results, but it certainly is no more admirable.

Japan Sends Tribute

Cherry Trees to Be Planted at Westinghouse Memorial In Park.

The arboreal setting of the George Westinghouse memorial in Schenley Park is to be made international in scope Saturday afternoon, when two cherry trees from Japan will be planted with appropriate ceremony. The trees are the gift of the Westinghouse Society of Japan. They should prove an interesting as well as beautiful addition to the leafy greenery that forms the natural frame for the memorial.

This tribute to a noted Pittsburgh inventor and scientist from admirers in Japan is of a nature typical of that country, where esthetic expression is not a second but first nature. The Japanese see in the cherry blossom not only its intrinsic beauty but a symbol of happiness and friendship, and this is the spirit that is carried with the gift.

In the springtime the Japanese cherry in bloom is a thing of enchantment. Trees at the Westinghouse memorial will seem spiritually significant when they come into blossom in future years. They are a most welcome gift.

When he married Jenny he had a job in a store and Jenny had $2,500 in the bank.

Jenny lent him the $2,500 and Rarick began to make money—it rolled in like a fabulous torrent.

The millions kept piling up and Rarick kept asking himself: "What Price Happiness?"

It would seem that with $35,000 a day happiness could be bought.

Rarick, by the way, is the multi-millionaire chain store magnate in Fannie Hurst's powerful novel "FIVE AND TEN," beginning serially in this newspaper today.

If you had been in Rarick's shoes — but read this illuminating story day by day.

Marry-Go-Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Why the "Weaker Sex" Is Weak

Now that women are wearing pajamas to dance in, they will probably soon be wearing them to swim in. Or to fly in.

* * *

There ought to be a system of traffic rules and "Stop Signals" all along the path of life for every woman.

Woman is always starting something; but she never knows when or where to STOP! That is her weakness, particularly in matters of clothes and love. In her bright lexicon there is no such word as "moderation."

* * *

A man can be just a little bit good or a little bit bad; just a little bit foolish or a little bit intelligent; just a little bit in love—and even just a little bit married.

* * *

But, once a woman starts going, she never puts on the brakes. Once she started out to get her "rights" and a few of man's privileges, she didn't stop until she got man's hair-cut, his cigaret, his pocket-flask, his slang, his profanity, his knickerbockers, his pajamas and most of his little bad habits.

* * *

Once she found the courage to lift her skirts an inch or two above her ankles, they kept on going up, like an express elevator, until they were several inches above her knees. Now, that she has decided to let them down, they are already sweeping the ballroom floor and will probably soon be saving the charwomen work around the office.

Once she started cutting her hair, she was not content until she attained the boyish-bob and looked almost like a convict; now she is letting it curl around her shoulders, like Little Eva's, and soon she will probably look like the Seven Sutherland Sisters.

* * *

Once she starts talking, she seldom stops for breath until she has exhausted both her argument and her audience.

* * *

Once she goes in for uplift and begins trying to reform a man, she keeps it up morning, noon and night, until he either passes on to heaven—or to some other woman.

* * *

In matters of love, the modern young woman thinks that she is quite as wise and sophisticated as a man. And so she is—but not as cool-headed. Once she discovers herself falling mildly in love with a man, she is not satisfied until she has worked herself into a high fever over him and either strangled or stifled him with her devotion.

* * *

That is why it is foolish for a woman to imagine that, just by imitating man, she can beat him at his own game. She never will, until she learns when and where to STOP!

How Byrd Located the Pole From Air

By Archibald Henderson

The significance of science, and the wonderful results it achieves with apparently simple means, are among the marvels of the modern age. Accurate instruments are devised by inventors, often after years and even centuries of thought, study and improvement by many different scientists and inventors. Then the mathematician, the engineer and the astronomer, one, two, or even all three, develop accurate theories, and devise mathematical formulas embodying these theories. Substituting the findings from accurate observations, made by skilled observers with exceedingly delicate instruments, into these equations, the final results give the desired determinations with simply amazing accuracy.

A series of such observations may be made, and these balanced against each other. By refined theoretical methods, of probability, least squares or what not, it is possible to determine the probable error.

In the end, we know how far off from the truth we are, either a fixed amount too much or too little. Thus, if we knew we were within five miles of the North Pole, we could travel a little more than the required distance for accuracy's sake; or even traverse a circle of sufficient radius, to be perfectly sure that the Pole lay inside the circle traversed on the earth's surface.

Consider, for example, the methods employed by Admiral Byrd, in making his journey to the North Pole in 1926, to determine whether or not he had actually attained the Pole. In the North Polar regions the problem is somewhat simplified since the airplane soars but a short distance above the earth's surface, whether ice fields or polar seas. The height of the plane above the surface, of either sea or ice, could always be determined immediately by means of the instrument known as the altimeter, which means height measurer. Once this height is known with accuracy, the ground speed may easily be determined by means of an instrument known as the speed and drift indicator. Unless the height of the plane above the earth's surface is accurately known, other and more extensive observations are required.

When Byrd made his North Polar flight in May, 1926, he took off from a known position on King's Bay. Constant observations were made by means of two instruments. The sun compass furnished him his direction, and the speed and drift indicator gave him course and direction. From time to time he secured observations of the direction of the sun above the horizon.

These observations gave him position lines which cut his plotted course at varying angles. Some of these angles were sufficiently large to enable him to check or determine his longitude, and thus the direction element of his dead reckoning. By thus effectively combining methods, Byrd was able to prove that he had closely approached the pole.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, May 7.—Exclusive country clubs are twittery over the prospect of aviation clubs usurping their popularity. Several have sprung up on Long Island. The most progressive to date is at Hicksville, which has a landing field and a hangar for 50 planes.

Membership is limited to 250. Naturally only the very wealthy are admitted. The Hicksville Club roster is studded with such names as Col. Lindbergh, John Hay Whitney, Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., and a sprinkling of duPonts, Biddles and Rockefellers.

On Sunday evenings, weather permitting, there is quite a gathering of fliers. William G. McAdoo, an air enthusiast, has dropped in from California for one or two week-ends. Amelia Earhart has also zoomed down to pay respects. And William B. Leeds, too.

Other clubs "on the fire" are at aristocratic Greenwich, Ct., and Redbank, N. J., Chicago, San Francisco, Los Angeles and Boston. The idea is eventually to have about 150 similar organizations in full running order in as many cities from coast to coast.

Thus the flier that belongs to one is privileged to stop over at all. The promoters hope to have the chain completely established in five years. Few realize the number of prominent men who are taking secret instructions in flying and are making solo flights incognito.

Many are of such commercial prominence they fear news of their air adventures might depress their stocks. A huge metropolitan aviation club is being planned for East Sixty-second street. Everybody is becoming "air conscious." And if they don't quit beefing about business I may take off myself.

Through a mistake in numbers this morning a courteous young lady answered a telephone call with: "Black, Starr & Frost, Gorham, Incorporated. Good morning." And I was tempted to rush her over a new set of breath.

A thirty minute drive up Pelham Parkway reveals an old time medicine show selling pain balm and Indian herb remedies. The stage was the back end of a canopied wagon with a flaring banjo torch on each side. The bill offered a ventriloquist, also two black face comedians, a peroxided soubrette and a lightning calculator. A bediamonded proprietor in wide hat and horse-blanket suit sold the medicine—15 bottles in as many minutes. Perhaps the French are right, but I'm so mad at them I hate to admit it, when they say the more the world changes the more it is the same thing.

I often wonder how many people move through life bearing an undeserved brand of scandal. Some years ago slumming in a Harlem black-and-tan a man dancing about with a simpering baby-faced girl was pointed out as a certain philanthropist. The informant said: "He sneaks up here to whoop things up." The other evening I met the philanthropist. He was not the person I saw in the night club and it developed he was in France at the time he was pointed out. Yet for several years I believed him to be a cheat.

An expert photographer writes me the "emoting" of Greta Garbo and Marlene Deitrich is not an outward show of an inner fire. He says it is a trick of the camera. "Watch their foreheads!" he announced. At my age I should run around town peeking at movie ladies' foreheads.

* * *

And Garbo is blamed for the business slump in hair parlors. Ladies who used to have their heads bobbed every 10 days now drop in every three months.

Passing through a hall I overheard a gentleman who lives two floors below tell a building attendant one of his ceilings nearly cracked at 10 o'clock last night. I tip-toed off. At that hour, Floyd Gibbons, departing, remarked that some day I would run out of writing material about New York. "Don't worry, I'll be doing the same old thing 10 years from now," I cried. But as he went down the elevator, did I knock wood? A ceiling "nearly cracked"—it is a wonder the building didn't fall in!

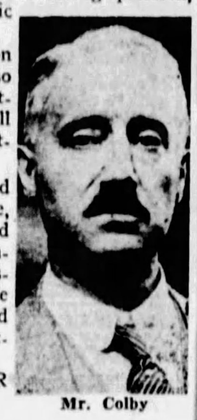
Recognition of Russia

Attitude Toward United States Is Theoretically and Practically One of Enmity.

By BAINBRIDGE COLBY

Who when Secretary of State in the cabinet of President Wilson was the author of the United States' formal declaration of policy in regard to recognition of Russia.

IN the interesting agenda of the Sixth Annual Congress of the International Chamber of Commerce in Washington this week, the Russian question looms large, and naturally so. It is a very important, as well as a very interesting question, both in its political and in its economic aspects.



Mr. Colby

The position of the United States on the subject of Russian recognition is so erroneously conceived by many who heatedly discuss it, that it may be useful to call attention to just what it is, and incidentally, what it is not.

So persistent has been the distortion and misrepresentation of the American attitude, that it is not surprising that many should be under the belief that the policy of non-recognition is intended to express our dislike of Communism and our unfavorable opinion of the internal organization and economic theories of the regime now functioning as a government in Russia.

NOTHING COULD BE FURTHER FROM THE TRUTH.

OUR original declaration of policy expressly disavowed "any desire to interfere in the internal affairs of the Russian people or to suggest what kind of government they should have."

And in stating that it is not possible for the government of the United States to recognize the present rulers of Russia as a government with which the relations common to friendly governments can be maintained, we took pains to add that "this conviction has nothing to do with any particular political or social structure which the Russian people THEMSELVES may see fit to embrace."

The difficulty, the impossibility in fact, of recognizing Russia is that her attitude toward us is theoretically and practically, one of enmity. It is a central principle of Russia's political creed that Bolshevism and what she calls "the capitalist state" cannot co-exist in the world; that the survival of the one presupposes and demands that the other shall perish and disappear.

RUSSIA'S mental state is one of mobilization for war. This sounds very silly from our point of view, but it is sedulously cultivated among the Russian people, and explains the recurrent alarms into which her people are thrown by the rumors disseminated from Moscow that the capitalist world is plotting an attack against them.

Pending the outbreak of open hostilities, the inevitable "war" is waged by economic thrusts, such as the dumping of goods, produced by conscript and starved labor, and by other activities less obvious, but all frankly designed to weaken and undermine "the enemy," in other words, the capitalist or non-Bolshevik world.

This habit of thinking in terms of aggression or defense has become a national obsession. The result is that the Russian people, deprived of the mental ventilation of uncensored world news and stuffed with grotesque propaganda, are a prey to the most fantastic fears, suspicions and resentments. Thus, placed by the Moscow theorists and fanatics in a false posture of mind toward contemporary life and the rest of the world, RUSSIA IS INCAPABLE OF SUSTAINING NORMAL INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS. Where it has been attempted, the result has been CONSTANT and DANGEROUS INTERNATIONAL FRICTION.

NOBODY has analyzed the problem of Russian recognition more realistically than former Secretary of State Elihu Root. It will be remembered that Mr. Root headed a friendly mission from this country to Russia during the early days of the revolution, and his penetrating mind has had the aid of impressions derived from actual presence on the scene of the Russian drama and personal contact with some of the chief actors in its earlier phases.

Mr. Root has expressed his convictions repeatedly, and I recall particularly the words he used at a testimonial dinner given to former Secretary Hughes shortly after the latter had closed his work at the Department of State.

"He knew," said Mr. Root, referring to Mr. Hughes, "that recognition means that each government accepts the implied assurance of the other government that it will maintain true friendship, true respect, true observance of the obligations of good neighborhood. And he knew also that the fundamental doctrine of the men who govern Russia now is that it is their mission in the world to overturn and destroy the government of the United States, of England, of France, of all the civilized nations of the western world.

"He knew that in the first place the act of recognition would be a formal and a solemn lie, a false pretense of accepting the obligations of the Bolshevik rulers of Russia to observe friendship to the government and the people of the United States.

"He knew that they did not intend friendship, but they intended enmity and destruction to the government of the United States and the institutions of the American people, and he knew in the second place that to recognize the Russian government would be to open the doors to them to carry out their purpose of destructive enmity, and would be a stupid and idiotic yielding to mere momentary expediency in order to make further disaster certain."

THIS puts the problem in a nutshell. YOU CANNOT RECOGNIZE AN ENEMY STATE. You cannot receive in friendly and mutually trustful relations a nation which protests that she is NOT friendly and which will use the diplomatic immunities which international usage accords to the representatives of a friendly state, as shields for incessant hostile propaganda against the peace and order, and the institutions of the friendly nation to whom such diplomatic agents are credited.

This has been shown in EVERY country, which has made the attempt to set up convention diplomatic contacts with the Stalin dictatorship.

Russia has never deviated from this attitude of enmity to all non-Bolshevik states. Within the last few weeks, in official declarations of Stalin, who controls not only the formal shell of the Soviet government, but the de facto government of Russia, which is the powerful central committee of the third internationale, this enmity has been savagely affirmed as one of the guiding principles of Soviet policy.

It may be that this propaganda would not prove formidable. I do not think it would myself. But as an indignity to the United Staes IT WOULD BE INTOLERABLE, if suffered to be carried on under the mask of friendly diplomatic relations.

ISN'T IT SO?

COMPLAINTS CITE HIGH FARES

Chamber of Commerce Ready To Investigate Charges Made by Penn Township

As a result of protests on bus fares between Penn Township and East Liberty, the East Liberty Chamber of Commerce today prepared to make a study of the rate situation through a special committee.

Complaints were received by the East Liberty chamber from residents of Penn Township. E. N. Bayard, president of the body, has been authorized to appoint a special committee to study the situation and file a report with the chamber's board.

FARES AT VARIANCE

Residents charge that rates between the township and East Liberty and between the township and Wilkinsburg conflict, according to Executive Secretary Patrick Hood. Passengers boarding a Pittsburgh Motor Coach Company bus at Frankstown and Verona roads are charged 25-cent fares to East Liberty, in comparison, it is asserted, to a 15-cent fare charged from the same point into Wilkinsburg by an independent bus concern. It is contended that the distances are approximately the same.

The independent buses are operated by Deere Brothers.

BALLOTS MAILED

Primary election ballots for the annual election of chamber directors are in the mails today. President Bayard has appointed the following election committee: J. W. Sherrer, chairman; G. A. Hoeveler, Jacob Graff and E. M. Diebold.

Ballots are due to be returned by May 15, when the 14 members carrying the majority votes will be listed and placed on a second ballot expected to be mailed the membership May 18. Members will name seven directors from the second ballot, which the committee will begin counting May 25.

BRADDOCK BUS LINES SOUGHT

Applications for two bus lines centering in Braddock today was before the Public Service Commission for action, following the appearance of James J. Dawson before Examiner Edward Best.

The first bus line proposed will cover a route from the Pennsylvania Station in Library avenue to Westmoreland and Braddock avenues, Swissvale. The second line would operate between Eighth and Braddock avenues, Braddock, and Stokes avenue and Earl street, North Braddock.

The latter application was protested by the Pittsburgh Railways Company. It was claimed that adequate transportation now was available.

GIRLS' CONCERT AIDS JOBLESS

A concert by 14 Squirrel Hill girls ranging in age from 7 to 10 years, and staged and directed by themselves, netted $10 for a donation to the Allegheny County Emergency Association to help the unemployed.

The program consisted of piano, violin and vocal solos and duets. It was held in the A. G. Richter home, 5454 Kipling road, Saturday afternoon.

Pitcairn Plans Beautification By Trees

Study of possible plans for the beautification of the borough is being conducted by the Pitcairn Shade Tree Commission with anticipation of a heavy planting program this fall.

Members of the newly-formed commission are C. B. Yothers, chairman; James Porter, secretary; L. S. Doutt and Fred Staats. Attorney John S. McGinnis is counsel for the commission.

COYNE TAX BILL PROTESTED

East Pittsburgh today prepared to oppose passage of the Senator James J. Coyne 50-cent poll tax bill now in the State Legislature.

President of Council John J. Navish was authorized to appoint a delegation to carry the protest to Harrisburg. The Chamber of Commerce and other civic groups will be invited to join in the protest.

Supper to Be Served In Braddock Church

A chicken supper will be served for the public by the Ladies' Aid Society of the Braddock Swedish Lutheran Church May 16.

Dance Held by Malta Knights and Dames

PITCAIRN GRADE BILL PASSED

East Borough Scouts To Compete in Tests

Boy Scouts from the East Boroughs Council will participate in a first aid demonstration in the Westinghouse Club gymnasium on May 15. More than 25 troops will compete, with the meet in charge of Chairman H. A. McCreanor and District Commissioner O. F. Rowe. The meet will determine the teams to compete in the county meet at Schenley Park, June 13, under auspices of the Western Pennsylvania Safety Council.

Wilkinsburg Church Greets New Members

A reception was held last night at the Second Presbyterian Church of Wilkinsburg for 236 new members added during the past year and for the Rev. Robert S. Steen, new assistant pastor. Members of the board and the Rev. Dr. John Franklin Troupe, pastor, greeted the members. The program, was arranged by the board of elders and the Ladies Aid Society, of which Mrs. C. A. Page was chairman.

67,000 CITIZENS REPRESENTED AT HEARING

Pleas Made for Old Brinton And Braddock—Swissvale Highway Being Studied

Engineers of the Department of Public Works are studying the merits of two sections of road on which improvements were asked by representatives of a delegation from the East Boroughs Improvement Association at a hearing before the County Commissioners Tuesday.

The delegation included S. P. McClure, C. B. Guthridge, John W. Hanna, Thomas L. Howard and M. J. Verosky. They represented Braddock, North Braddock, Rankin, Edgewood, Swissvale, East Pittsburgh, Forest Hills and Braddock Township.

Of Duplan's Famous Du Ray

Duplan's Du Ray is a rich-textured crepe that takes beautifully to prints—that's why the colors in these dresses are so rich, clear, glowing—typical of THIS Spring. The material tailors exceptionally well, and we'll be glad to have you examine the cut and workmanship very carefully—that's how much we think of it! Such smart details as cowl necklines, fitted jackets (in the Misses' Sizes) and two-piece effects establish their style-rightness. Pastel prints on backgrounds of black, navy, brown and green. Sizes 14 to 20 and 38 to 44.

BALL CLUB PUTS FIELD IN SHAPE

Members of the P. D. Pasquale Baseball Club of Oakland had a diamond of which they were rather proud today, following several weeks work, undertaken when they despaired of receiving help from the city to put Frazier playground into shape so that they could use it as a baseball field.

Acquired by the city some years ago, the playground had been used by contractors and others as a place to dump old mortar, bricks, plaster and dirt. Today because of the efforts of the ball team, it presents an inviting appearance to children of the Frazier street district desiring a place to play.

A. N. Diulus, manager, and Andrew Curtain, captain of the team, put the members of the outfit to work clearing away stones and debris and leveling off the field as part of their "spring training."

Diulus said that repeated complaints to city officials relative to the condition of the playground had gone undeeded and that because his team needed the field he and his men either had to put it into shape or had to do without a field.

Children in the vicinity of Frazier and Ward streets, the section near the field, have had no place to play except in the streets because of the condition of the playgrounds. Parents and school officials also sought to have the grounds cleaned up and equipped for play, but to no avail, Diulus said.
